Dedication

1968 marked the end of an era, the era of Dr. Lloyd S. Michael. Serving as a dynamic and visionary superintendent for twenty years, Dr. Michael was responsible for maintaining and extending the leadership of ETHS in the field of secondary education and for helping to give ETHS its reputation as "a lighthouse school."

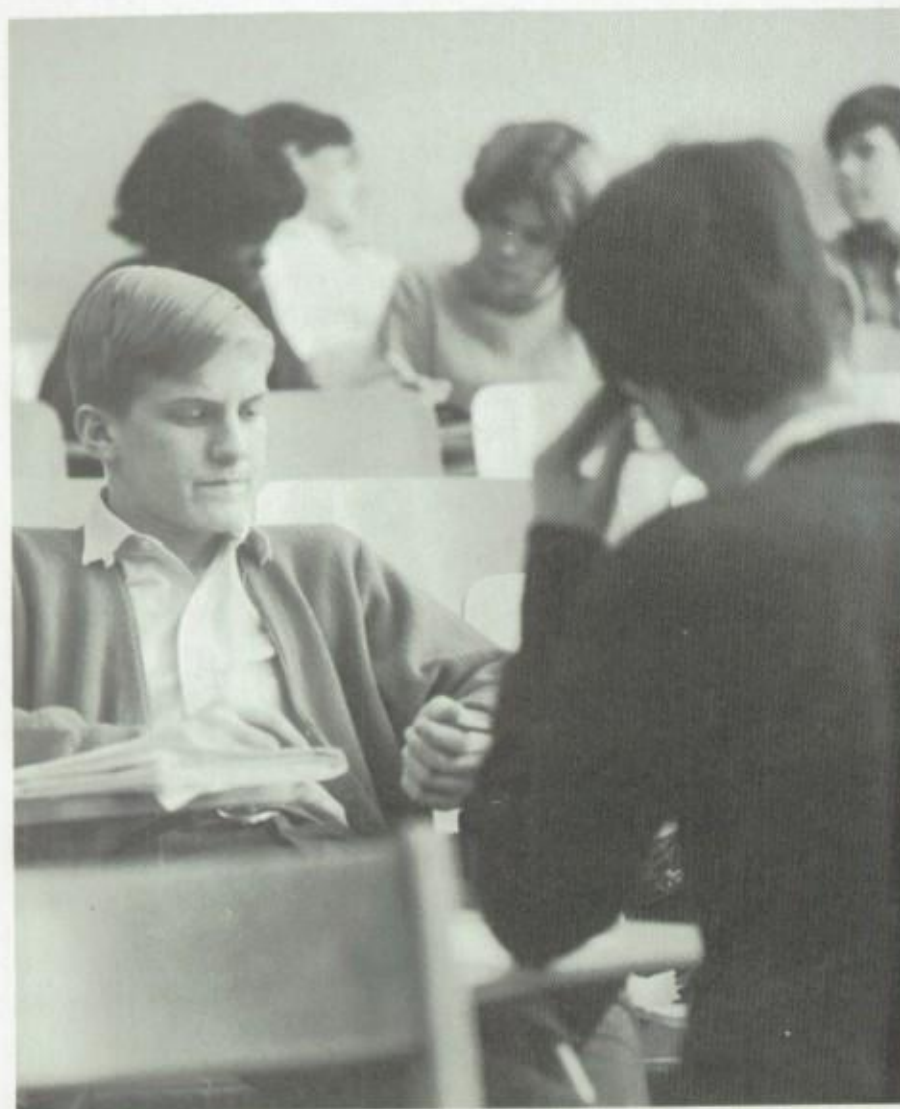

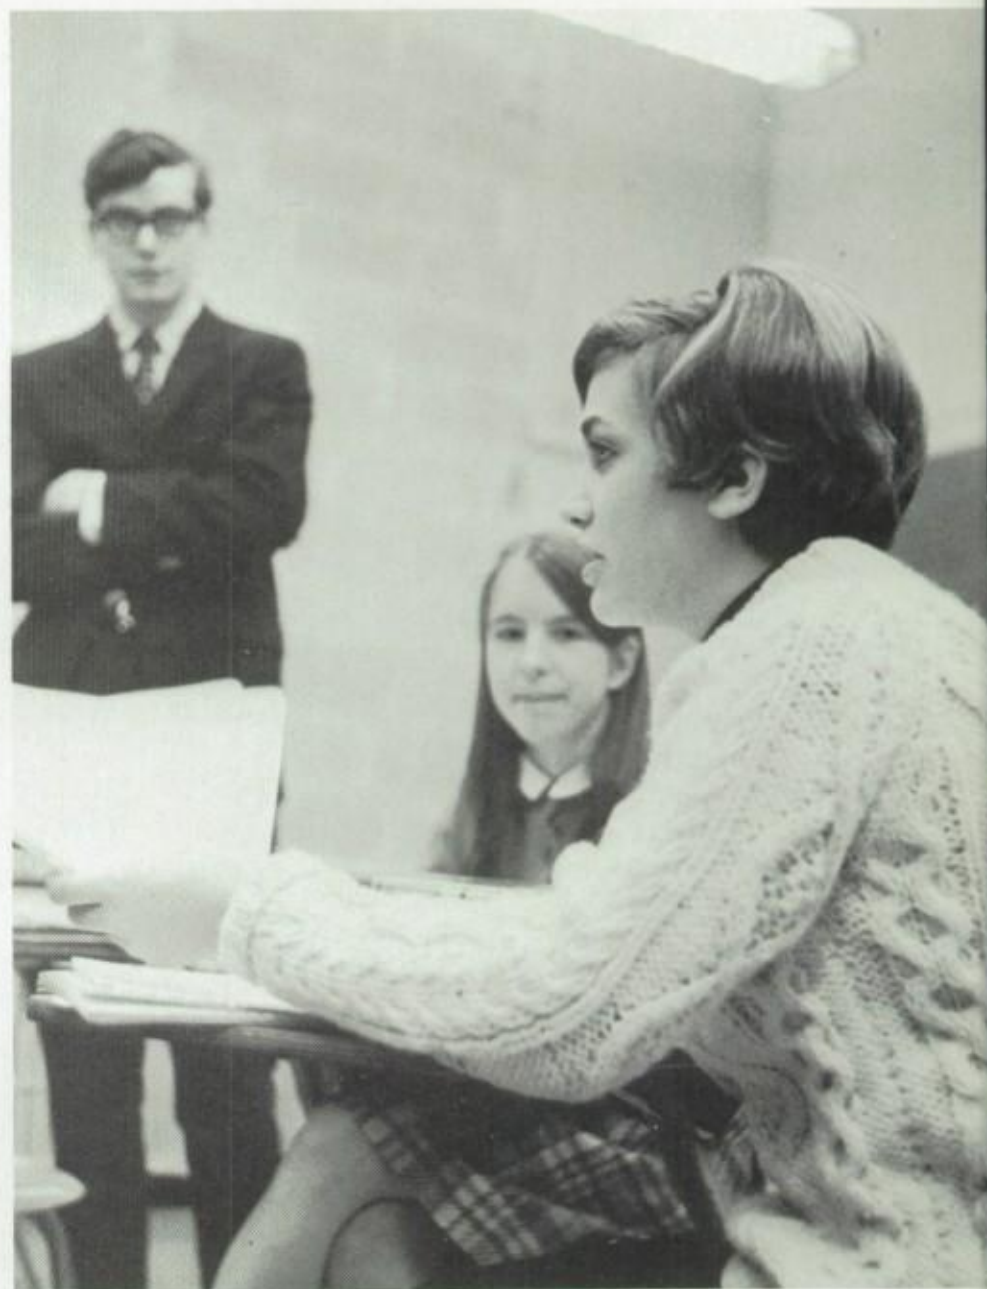

The era of Dr. Michael was an era of expansion, an era characterized by construction of modern facilities and adoption of modern methods of teaching. Under his leadership, team-teaching, closed-circuit television, language laboratory instruction, and advanced placement college level courses were innovations added to the ETHS curriculum structure. Dr. Michael's continued concern with maintaining high caliber education in the constantly changing environment of secondary education made these and other changes possible.

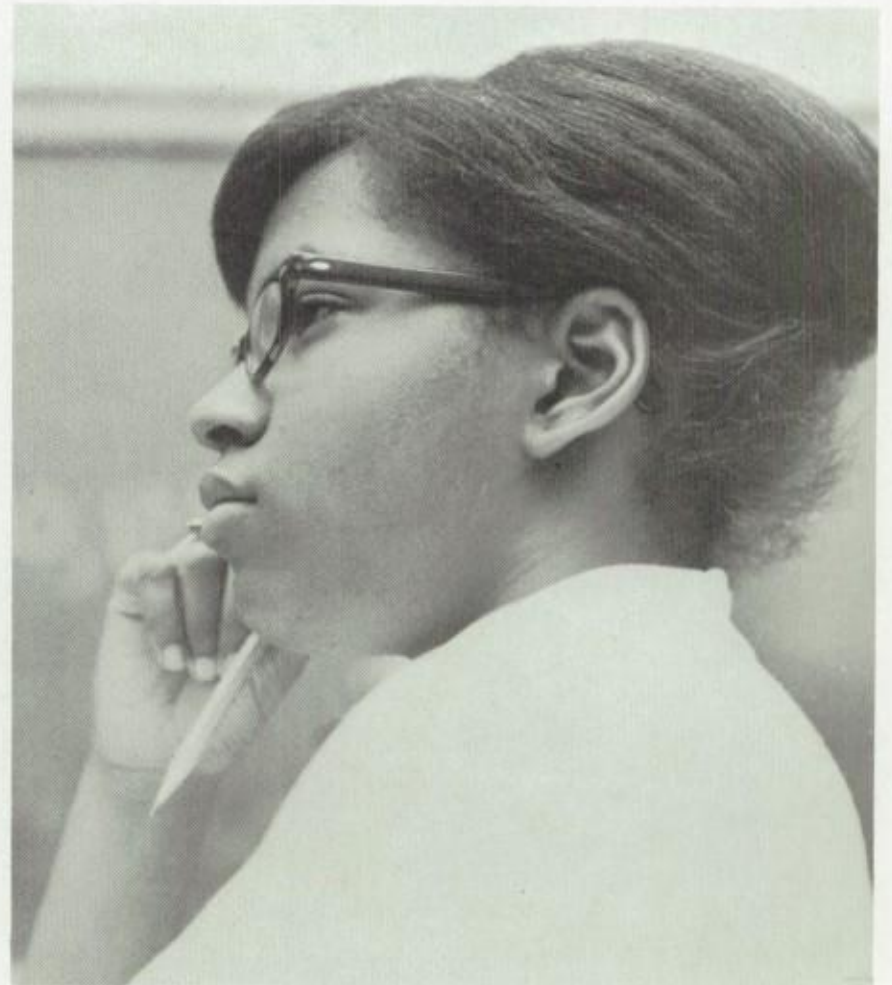

Because new facilities are vital to the success of new curriculum changes, a new natatorium and physical education building, the auditorium and music wing, technical arts facilities, and additions to the library were necessary additions.

Dr. Michael's final triumph came when modular scheduling was implemented and extensive physical facilities were added to the campus to make ETHS four schools within one school. The four-school-concept fulfilled Dr. Michael's vision of making possible students' maturing as individuals through the responsibility of using their classroom and unscheduled time to receive the fullest benefits of their high school experience. Resource centers, open laboratories, study halls, counseling offices, and nonacademic areas enhanced student opportunities to advance educationally. Dr. Michael's dream reached new heights in 1967 when ETHS became the school "on the cutting edge of tomorrow."

After three superintendents with last names beginning with "B," Boltwood, Beardsley, and Bacon, declared to stand for "the Best," an Evanstonian editorial of 1948 declared the new superintendent's name to stand, in the ETHS tradition, for "More of the Best." To Dr. Michael, the man who gave "More of the Best" to ETHS, the 1968 Key gratefully dedicates this book.

A split, abruptly divided school reaches out
 For cohesion . . . and finds it
 In spirit and loyalty, academic learning experiences,
 Shared frustrations, triumphs.
 Striving for uniqueness,
 Schools explore, initiate activities.
 Overall confusion subsides as Students become assimilated into diversified schools.
 New friends and experiences increase insight,
 Knowledge is added to accumulated fact.
 Students adjust to separation, retaining the oneness
 Of Evanston Township High School .
 1968: A year of Unity Through Division.

Confusion mounts . . . and subsides
 As students accustom themselves to a new system.
 Complicated computer wires and involved math theorems
 Become similar problems
 To be challenged by persistent students.
 Confusion erupts as students
 rush to class,
 Ponder ideas, and seek understanding.
 New procedures cause perplexity
 In orderly fire drills and organized thought.
 Students seek guidance from their confusion
 And find it in teachers and counselors.
 Confusion forced by newness yields to order.

Four schools-within-a-school
dissipate friendship,
Suddenly isolate time-tested
camaraderies.
Remorse dominates study,
solitary walks.
Loneliness pervades the ever-changing environment.
As new friends are found,
Common interests and desires are unified
By loyalty to one's school.
As students adjust, new intimacies are formed.
Taking advantage of newfound friends
Students increase their learning experience.
Shared academic pursuit conforms casual acquaintance Binding together those who have met the challenge.

Increased freedom causes increased dependence
 And students resolve their needs
 In closer student-teacher relationships.
 Modern facilities for conferences and Hallway encounters provide the atmosphere
 For mutual understanding.
 Problems about history or a thwarted football pass Widen opportunities to communicate.
 Academic dependence and physical dependence
 Grow out of a new system,
 And students and faculty adapt themselves
 To meet a new need.

The new modular system results
 In extensive unscheduled time for the ETHS student,
 And he learns to use his increased freedom
 In academic pursuits, extracurricular activities, and relaxation.
 Independence encourages individual accomplishment
 As the student budgets his time to fit his needs.
 Cafeterias and Resource Centers, Specialized laboratories and studios provide the means
 For independent achievement.
 Development of independent learning techniques augments
 Personal maturity as student responsibility
 Is expanded.

New academic challenges and independence Necessitate revolutionary change. This need is met Through Resource Centers, laboratories, and study halls;
In cafeterias, lounges, and

ETHS students saw a relaxation of rules and a greater amount of independence and freedom this year because of the modular scheduling, but with it came new responsibilities for organizing time and achieving a full academic potential.

The division of Evanston into four semi-independent schools presented problems and challenges to both administrators and students this first year, but Dr. Clyde Slocum, the new West School principal, saw the difficulties of transition as only a temporary stage.

Among the problems encountered by the administration were student accountability and anonymity, a feeling of loss in a school as large as ETHS even though it subdivided into four schools.

Surprisingly, discipline was not a major problem under the new system. According to Dr. James Elliot, South School principal, there were fewer instances of classroom misbehavior than last year, but disciplinary difficulties arose where groups had more opportunities to congregate. Honor guards and assigned study halls checked the few instances of misconduct that did occur.

Mr. Edward Curry, East School principal, felt the new ETHS organization offered a greater accessibility of teachers and counselors to students who wanted help with either personal or educational problems. Dr. Elliot believed a more personalized atmosphere on a one-to-one basis helped students to grow intellectually and individually.

New facilities provided the student with opportunities for research, independent study, and relaxation. Open science labs, the resource centers, lounges, and individual school buildings took pressure off students and teachers.

Mr. Philip McDevitt, the new North School principal, said the modular system demanded decisions of students and faculty in learning to gain the fullest advantage from the flexible scheduling.

Mr. Curry credited the students of ETHS for making the transition from a traditional nine-period day to the revolutionary modular schedule a success.

Dr. Slocum expects the flexible system to hold much promise for the future as structural changes begin to affect ETHS. The inevitable combining and separating processes that have begun this year and will continue will offer future Evanstonians an opportunity to eliminate the problems which former classes have encountered.

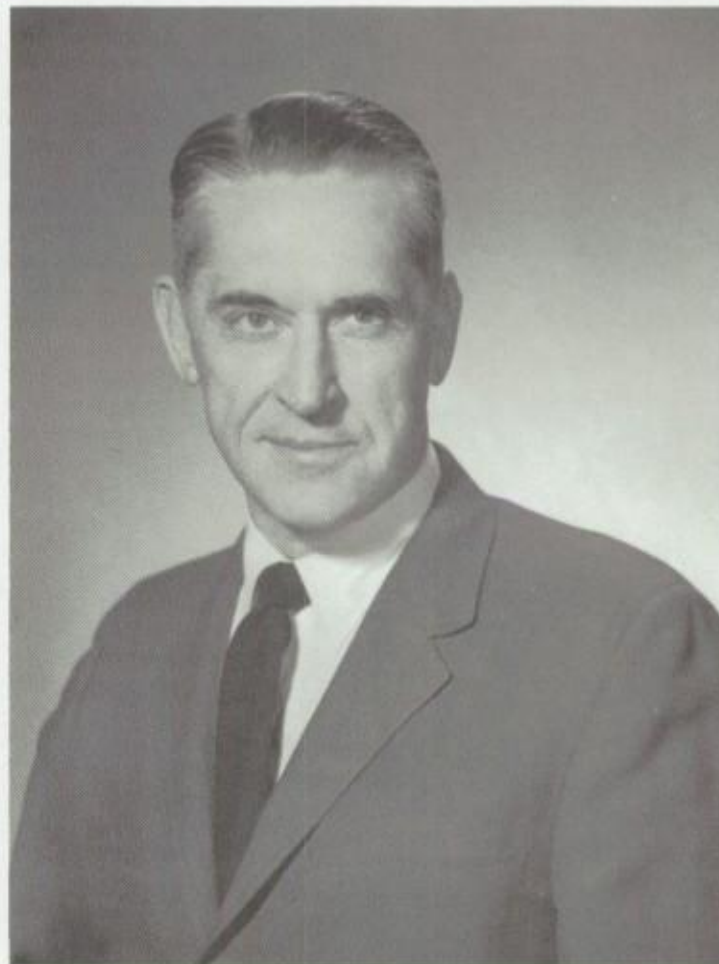

Mr. Norval Henn, Mr. Harold Weeks, Mr. Larry Olson, and Mr. Bill Johnson were grade level directors in East School.

In North School, Mr. Murney Lazier, Mr. Raymond Anderson, Mr. Stephen Powers, and Mr. Frank Bace served as grade level directors.

Grade level directors in South School were Mr. Carlyle Ehri, Mr. Myron Rodee, Mr. Walter Satterthwaite, and Mr. Thomas Allen.

Acting as grade level directors in West School were Mr. Paul Wertz, Mr. Henry Bischoff, Mr. James Nelson, and Mr. Ronald Gearing.

Assistant principals were Mr. Lester Dean in East School and Mr. Robert Elliott in North School. Mr. Robert Trevarthen acted as assistant principal in South School, and Mr. Ronald Walden served in West School.

East and North modernize and synchronize English Department

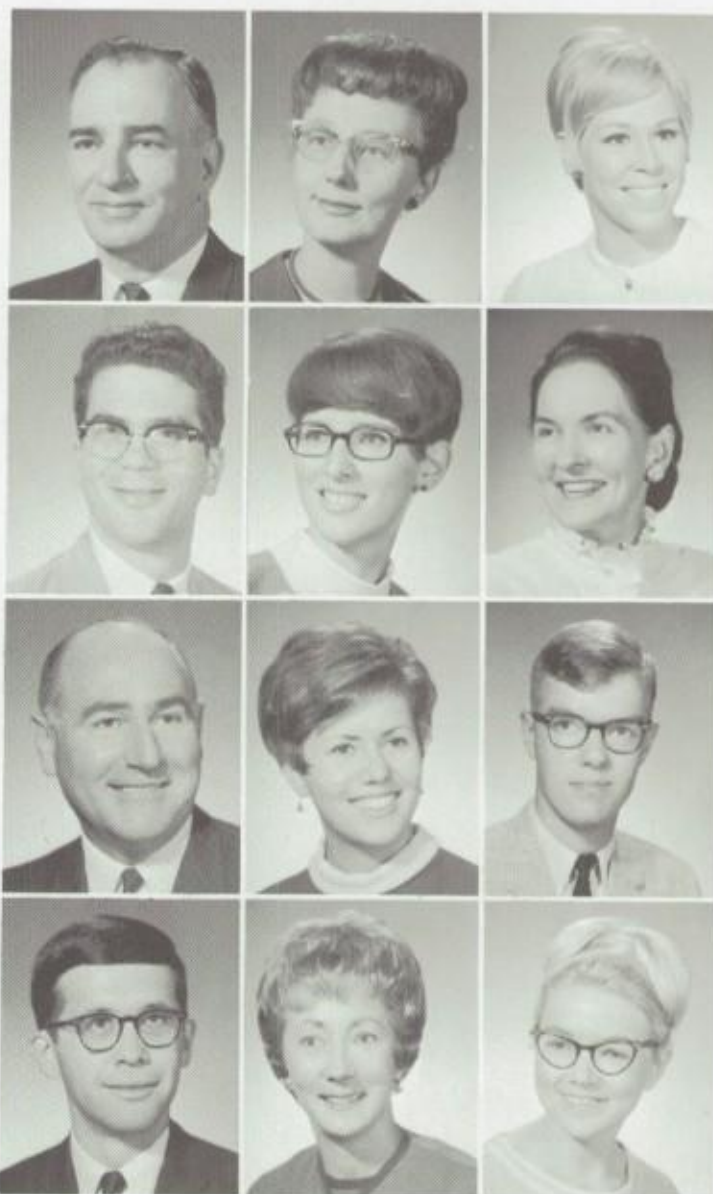

Four separate schools demanded new approaches to teaching, necessitating the adaptation of East and North English Departments to a different type of curriculum. Chairmen were named from each school, but the entire department remained under the supervision of Mr. Clarence Hach.

The English Department in North School was headed by Mrs. Barbara Pannwitt, and in East School by Miss Mary Jane Richeimer.

Mr. Robert Lumsden, in the newly created position of Composition Co-ordinator, lectured to English classes in all four schools on expository writing, saving English teachers the time they would normally spend preparing composition lectures.

"Attitudinal changes toward language," an extension of the language program, and a unit in which students examine the language of special groups, culminated in the compilation of a "hictionary," a dictionary of "hip" language used by teenagers.

Small group discussions encouraged learning through personal contact, whereas large group meetings were used primarily for lectures and movies.

As a result of the division of ETHS, the South and West School English Departments named a chairman to head their respective departments. Mrs. Betty White supervised the South School English Department, and Mr. Eugene Stern, who was new to Evanston this year, headed the department in West School.

English teachers gained valuable time by issuing take-home exams. In addition, students were required to view filmstrips, listen to recordings, and use the microfilm readers and printers in the library during unscheduled time. Class activities included lectures, seminar discussions, and large group projects. Shorter class time placed more responsibility on the student for completing his assignments and learning outside of his class.

All tenth grade classes were involved for the first time in a lexicology-lexicography unit in which the grammar of the word and a more detailed knowledge of how a dictionary is compiled were stressed.

Crosslectures and team teaching dominated this year's program of the Social Studies Department in North and East Schools. Teachers specializing in a particular field of history lectured to classes studying that area of history which enabled students to gain a more thorough understanding of the course.

The humanities gained a new emphasis in many of the social studies classes by incorporating into the traditional history course a study of the fine arts and literature.

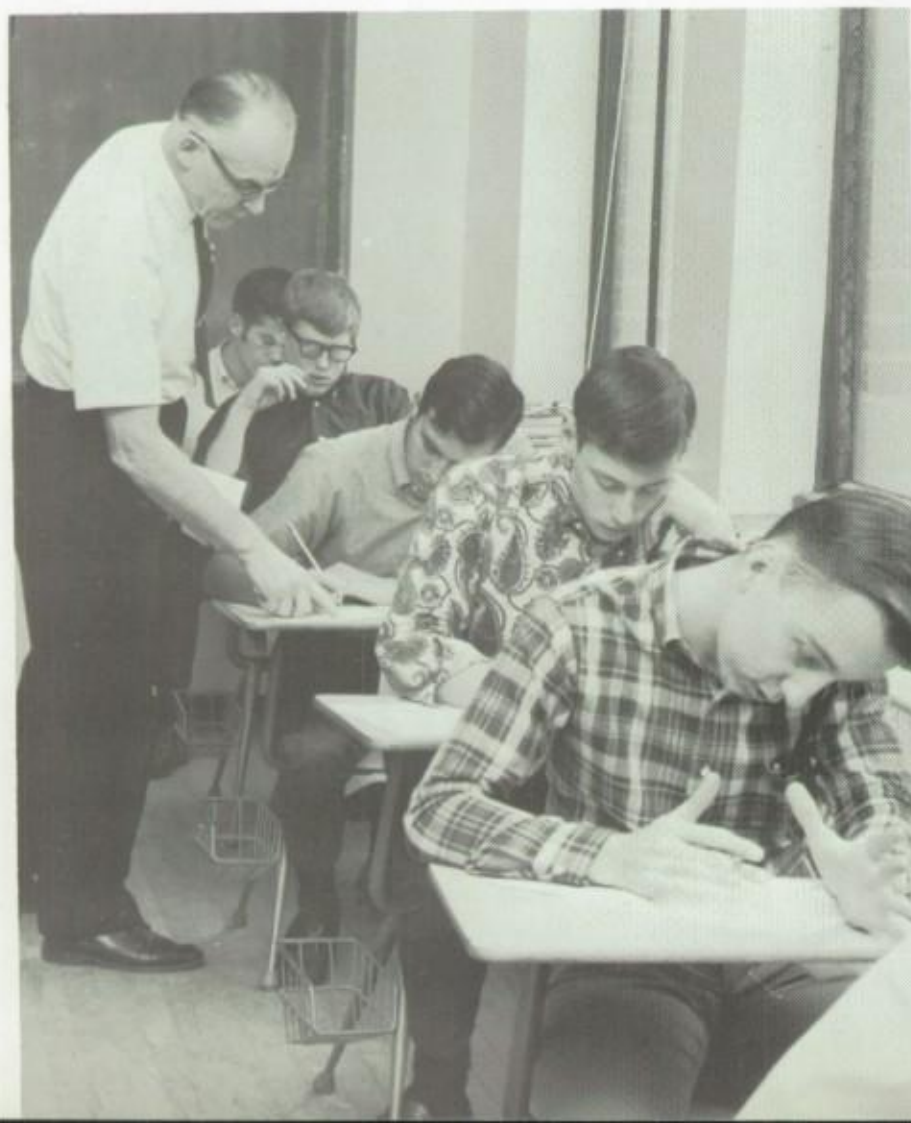

Experimental work in formulating more comprehensive tests was undertaken by faculty members. Diagnostic tests were given to students in an effort to discover their weaknesses and ways to improve teaching methods.

Classes met three days per week for three modules. More materials and facilities were made available to students for independent study.

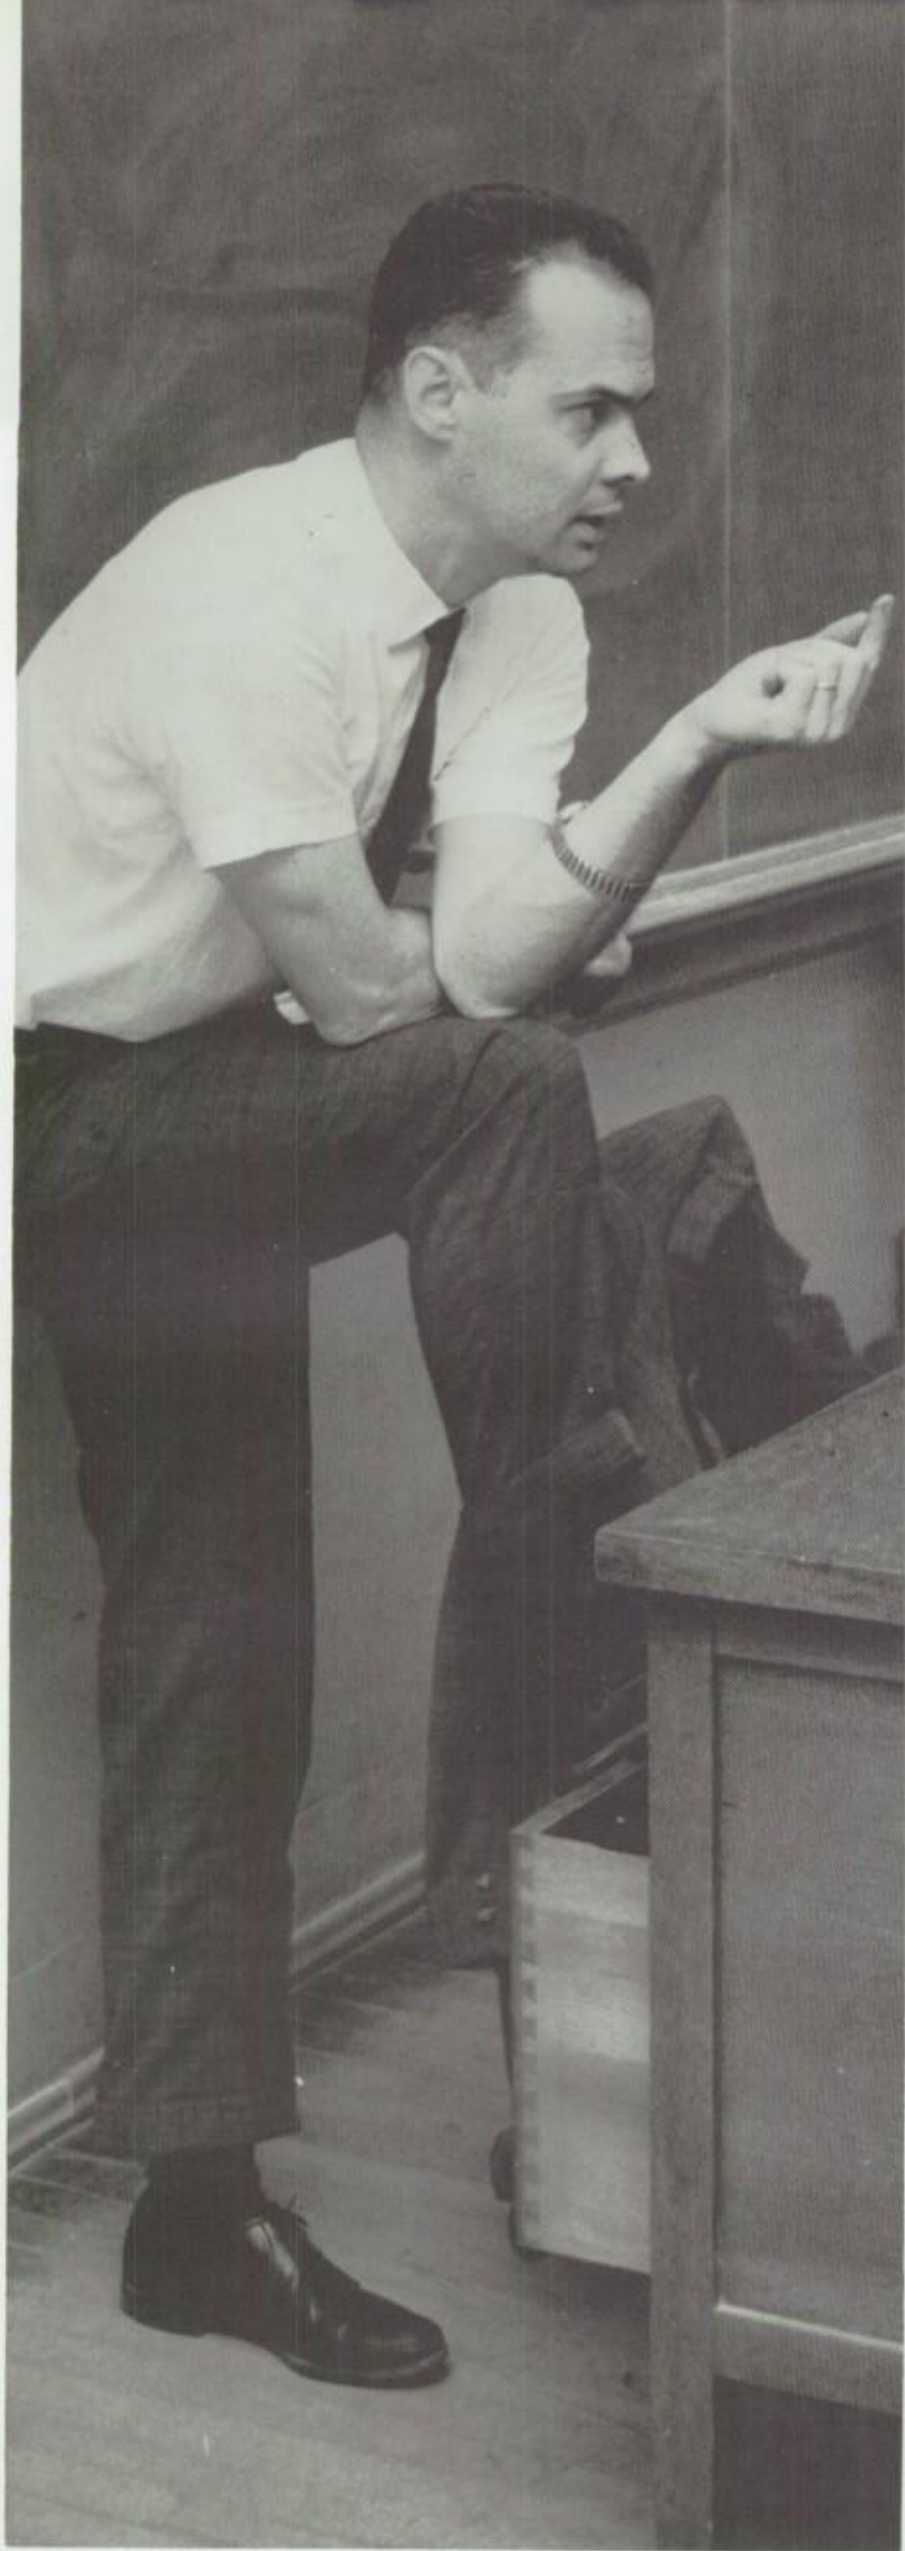

Team teaching was once again an integral part of the Social studies program. Faculty members worked for closer cooperation and communication among themselves in creating a more conducive atmosphere for independent learning.

Mr. Bernard Mattson, who has been at ETHS since 1924, planned to retire at the end of this year. Mr. Mattson has served ETHS for 44 years, having been absent for two years to work on a master's degree.

South and West Social Studies stress international understanding

Emphasis upon student freedom and responsibility highlighted this year's Social Studies programs in South and West Schools.

"The Negro Heritage," a new credit course, gave students a better insight into the history of the American Negro. The course, which was offered three quarters, drew enrollment from all four schools. In all courses, a better understanding of the peoples of the world was stressed.

A program of increased independent study opportunities and reduced class time was incorporated into the Social Studies curriculum. Emphasis was placed on the student's responsibility for exploring new aspects of his respective history course.

Team teaching classes helped students to gain a wider perspective of the areas which they were studying. College-level classes met only four modules a week, further emphasizing the students' responsibility for independent study.

Student participation is integral part of Combined Studies

Individualized study opportunities and programs characterized the Combined Studies departments in South and West Schools.

Flexible scheduling allowed for a closer student-teacher relationship on an individualized basis. The new facilities provided more opportunities for independent study, the utilization of problem-solving techniques, and increased possibilities for student leadership.

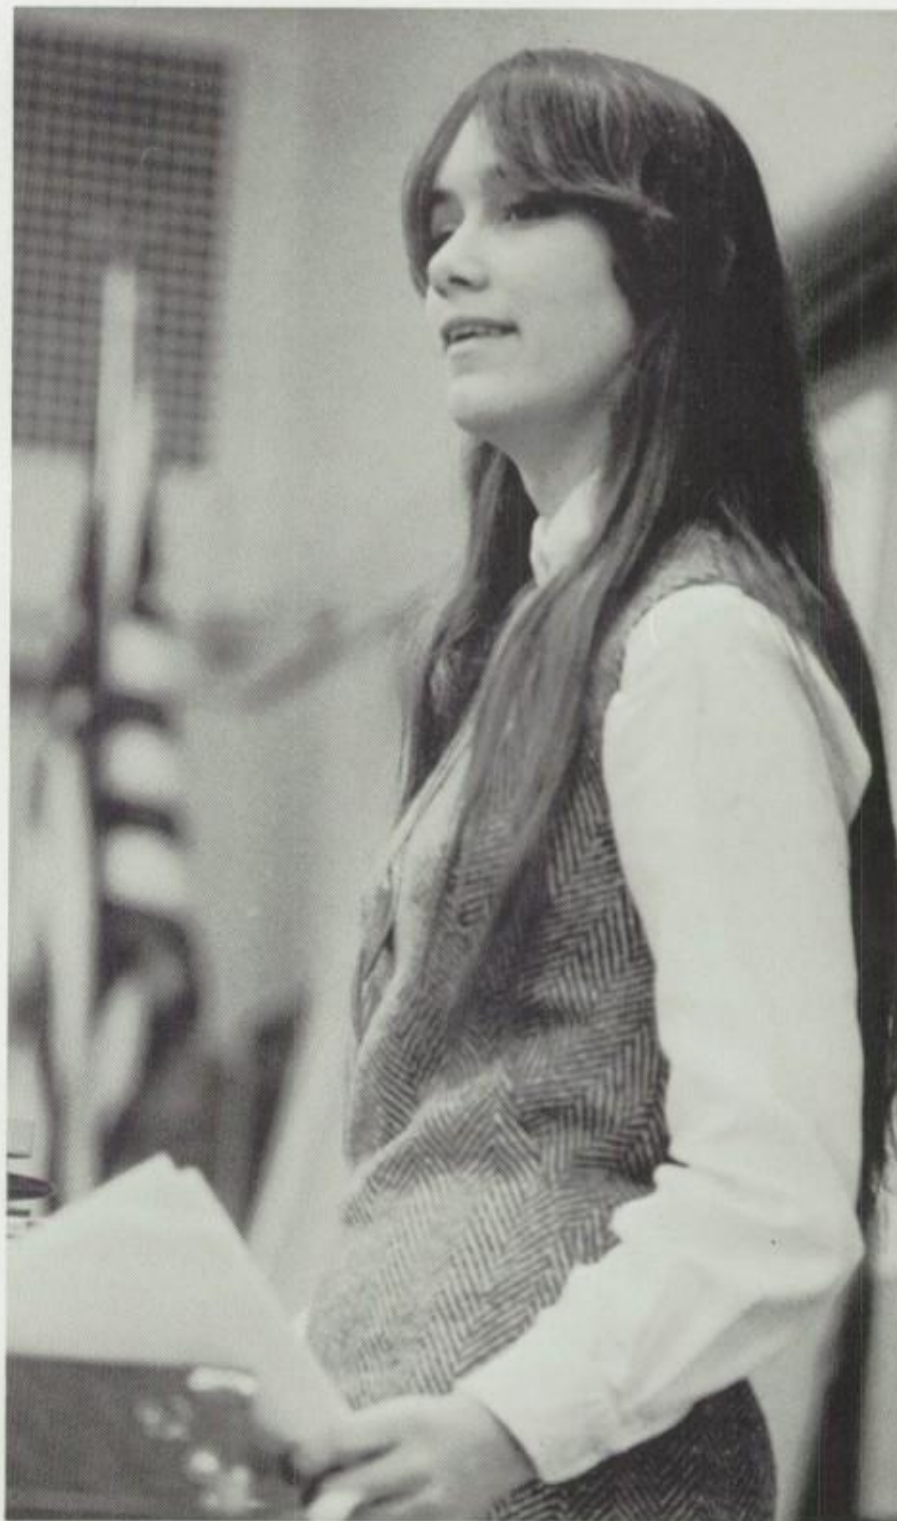

Student participation in small group and seminar activities highlighted the curriculum. Students acquired skills in effective argumentation, poise in public speaking, and self-confidence in taking and defending a stand. Students learned the value of constructive criticism as well. Independent research and open discussion among classmates taught students how to work alone and cooperate with others.

The new resource centers aided students in the development of a higher performance in skill and content area. They also assisted students when working on projects and assignments. Literature, history, religion, art, music, and drama were studied in greater depth through dramatizations and study projects.

Mr. William Guelcher, a West School Combined Studies teacher, was one of five teachers in the United States to receive a reward for outstanding teaching from Yale University. Mr. Guelcher received special recognition from Yale and a one-thousand-dollar prize.

East, North Language stress independent study

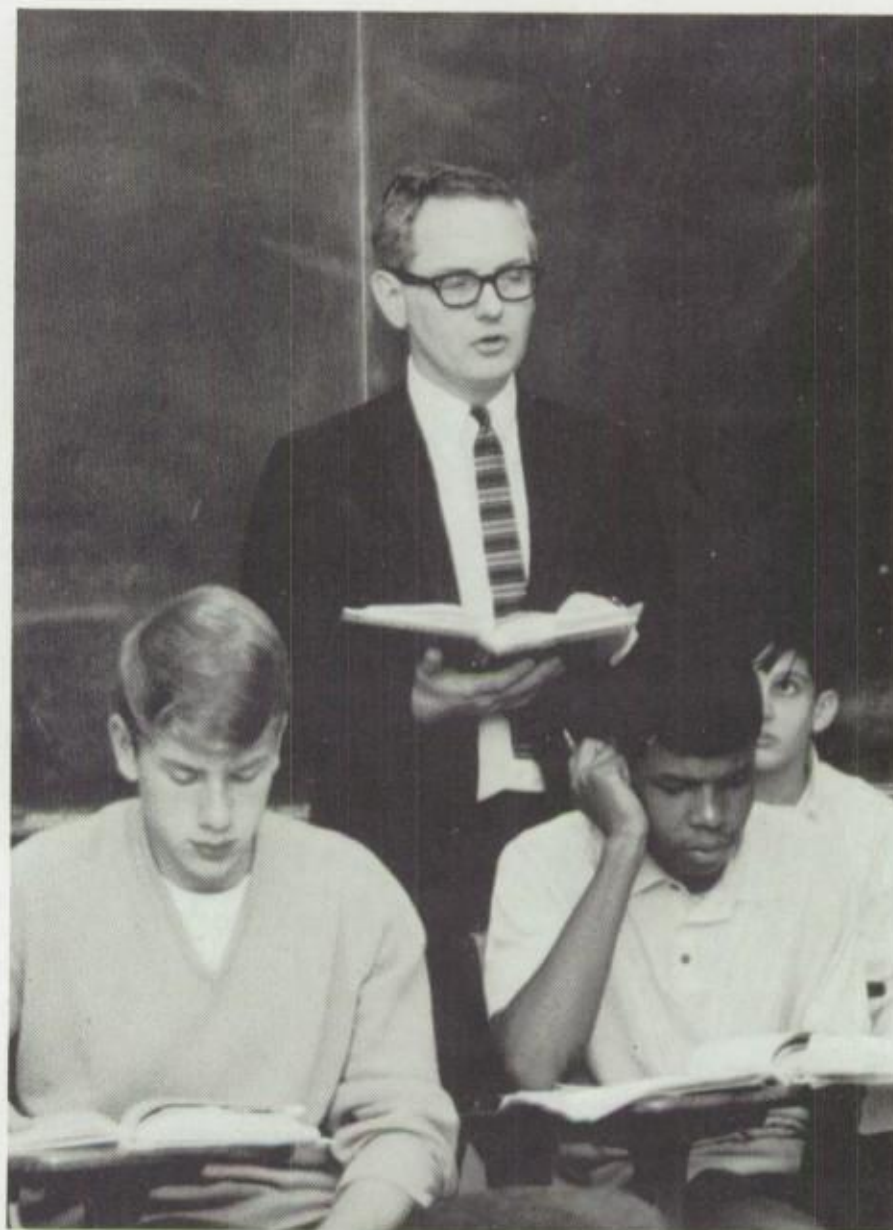

Independent study highlighted the Language Department in East and North Schools with more opportunities for students to utilize the language lab and audio-visual equipment.

The use of study projects to enrich the classroom curriculum was stressed in foreign language this year because of reduced class time, especially in the upper levels. Transparencies were used by students in third and fourth year language to review grammar, syntax and composition.

Students used the language laboratory more independently this year. First and second year language students worked with drill tapes while teachers kept records of the student's progress. Composite tapes were available to third and fourth year language students for review of language fundamentals.

Among the distinctively large variety of language courses offered at ETHS were Spanish, French, Chinese, Greek, German, Russian, Latin, Japanese, and English for the foreign student.

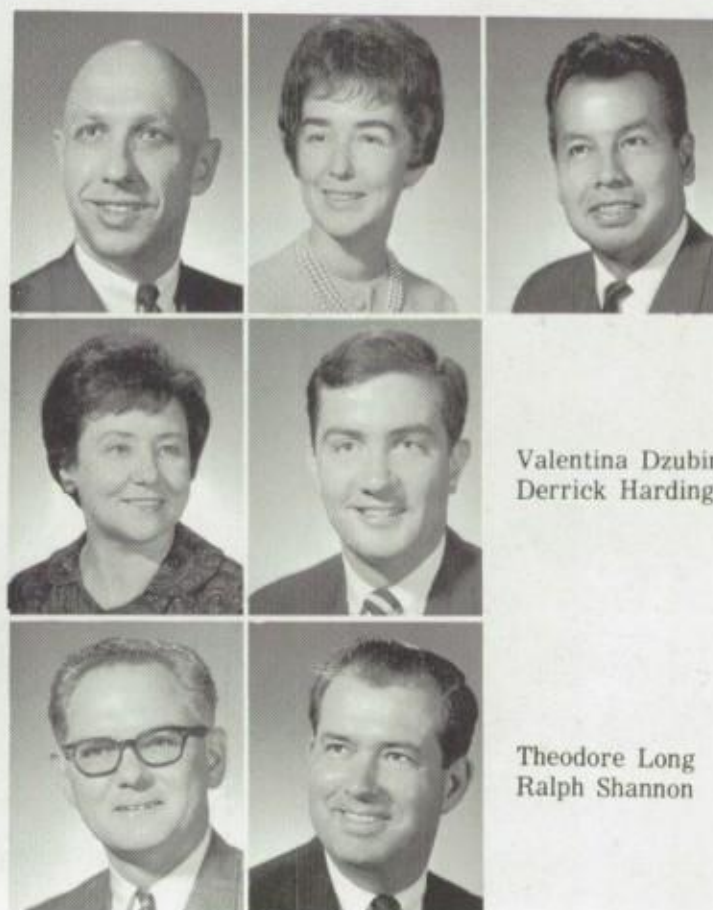

Mrs. Estella Gahala headed North School Language, and Mrs. Helen Hammer supervised East School Language.

The new flexible schedule this year increased teacher-student contact in the Language Department in South and West Schools while providing more time for independent study.

French classes incorporated units on French art and music into the second, third, and fourth year language courses. Taped and written lectures on French composers were available to students in the resource centers.

Language teachers established a learning performance criteria requiring students to achieve a certain degree of proficiency before progressing to new learning material.

Students were able to borrow tapes from the language lab for use in study carrels in the resource centers. Plans to wire classrooms to the language lab for immediate access to aural-oral materials were being put into operation this year.

Because of the division of ETHS, Mr. Albert Turner headed the Language Department in South School, and Mr. Rolland DuBosq directed West School Language.

Innovations made by Math Departments in North and East

The transfer to a modular system provided unscheduled time for projects and allowed students to explore new aspects of mathematics.

Juniors and seniors were offered a new course in probability on an independent study basis. Students used study kits which programmed the course for them, while the instructor acted as a consultant who kept records of the student's progress.

A new computer terminal unit, which served as a teletype communication with Tarrytown, New York, was installed in the East School Resource Center Mathematics Laboratory for use by all students. Tapes of all class lectures were made accessible to students to broaden their knowledge of a certain aspect of their respective math course. Students wishing to evaluate their progress in a particular area of math were issued diagnostic tests on an optional basis.

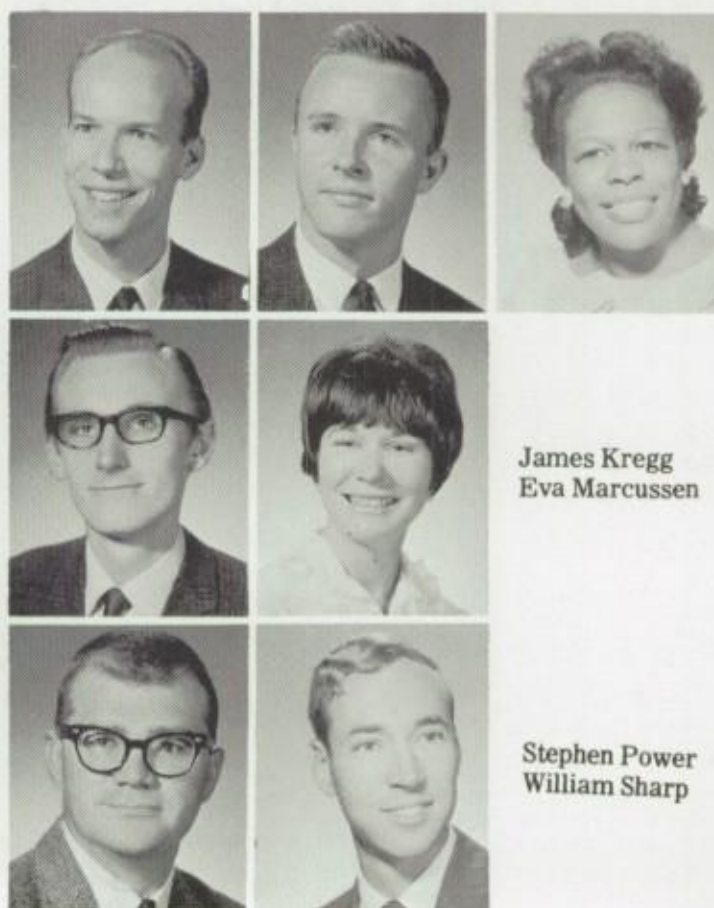

Due to the division of ETHS into four schools, the Math Department named Mr. Robert Hurst chairman in North School, and Miss Grace Broughton was appointed chairman from East School.

Math Departments in South and facilities

The Math Departments in South and West School offered more modern and greater facilities for students to help themselves.

Desk calculators and open labs were utilized by teachers and students during unscheduled time. Students were able to participate in individual work seminars to supplement and increase their knowledge of mathematics. Teachers in West School introduced a system which provided for optional problem discussions three or four times a month.

The Math Department also began preparations for a new math resource center which would be open to all students and teachers. Programmed materials, desk calculators, film strips, and special math typewriters will be made available to students and faculty.

The division of ETHS necessitated a change in the organization of the Math Department. Mr. Raymond Venn headed the Math Department in South School, and Mr. Robert Doepp was chairman in West School.

opens vivarium to all schools

With the opening of the North School vivarium and new laboratories in North and East Schools, the science departments were able to offer realistic, individualized courses for science students.

Biology students from all four schools were given access to the North School vivarium, where they could observe the developments of both plant and animal life in a controlled environment. A duo fish aquarium with a circulation pool and another with still water encouraged the breeding of fish.

A new course, Introductory Physical Science, was offered to freshman students as a foundation for later sciences courses. An intensive training laboratory was located in North School but was open to students from each school. Here, students enrolled in General Science T spent nine weeks with specialized teachers exploring aspects of biology, earth science, chemistry, and physics. The course, unique because it used no text, stressed individualized instruction.

South and West Schools stress independent scientific research

With the new modular system, South and West Schools made open labs available to students who wished to work on experiments or class projects.

New methods were devised this year to improve classroom instruction. Video tapes were made of classroom sessions to enable students to make up missed lectures. In the intensive training laboratory and in biology classes, students made their own tapes of experiments. A comprehensive collection of materials were added to supplement the textbooks and provide material for those interested in outside research.

Students participated in various science contests, with 13 seniors competing in the Westinghouse Science Talent Search. The Junior Academy of Science Expositions was open to all students. Stephen Becker was awarded the Bausch and Lomb Award, which enabled him to compete for a scholarship to the University of Rochester.

Geology students visited the Wisconsin Dells, Devil Lake area in Wisconsin, the Kettle-Moraine area in White-water, Wisconsin, and Starved Rock in Yorkville, Illinois.

Music Department adds resource center

A difficult trumpet passage is perfected by Robert Fund and Mark Alexander.

The Music Department expanded its facilities and divided chorus classes in adapting to the new atmosphere at ETHS this year.

The Music Resource Center, located in the music office, was partially completed the first semester; more equipment and more extensive materials were added the second semester. The resource center was installed to aid students in musical research for class assignments or independent study.

Chorus classes were divided into schools for the first time, and students from all four schools participated in music festivals. Glee clubs, choruses, ensembles, and honor choirs participated in the four Christmas festivals. The Spring Music Festival combined the choruses from all four schools.

The Music Department offered opportunities for students to expand on their classroom vocal experience through special vocal groups. These ensembles were designed for students with the talent and desire to perform on a more individual basis.

Speech Arts highlights activities for students

Expansion of facilities and extra-curricular activities marked changes in the Speech Arts Department this year.

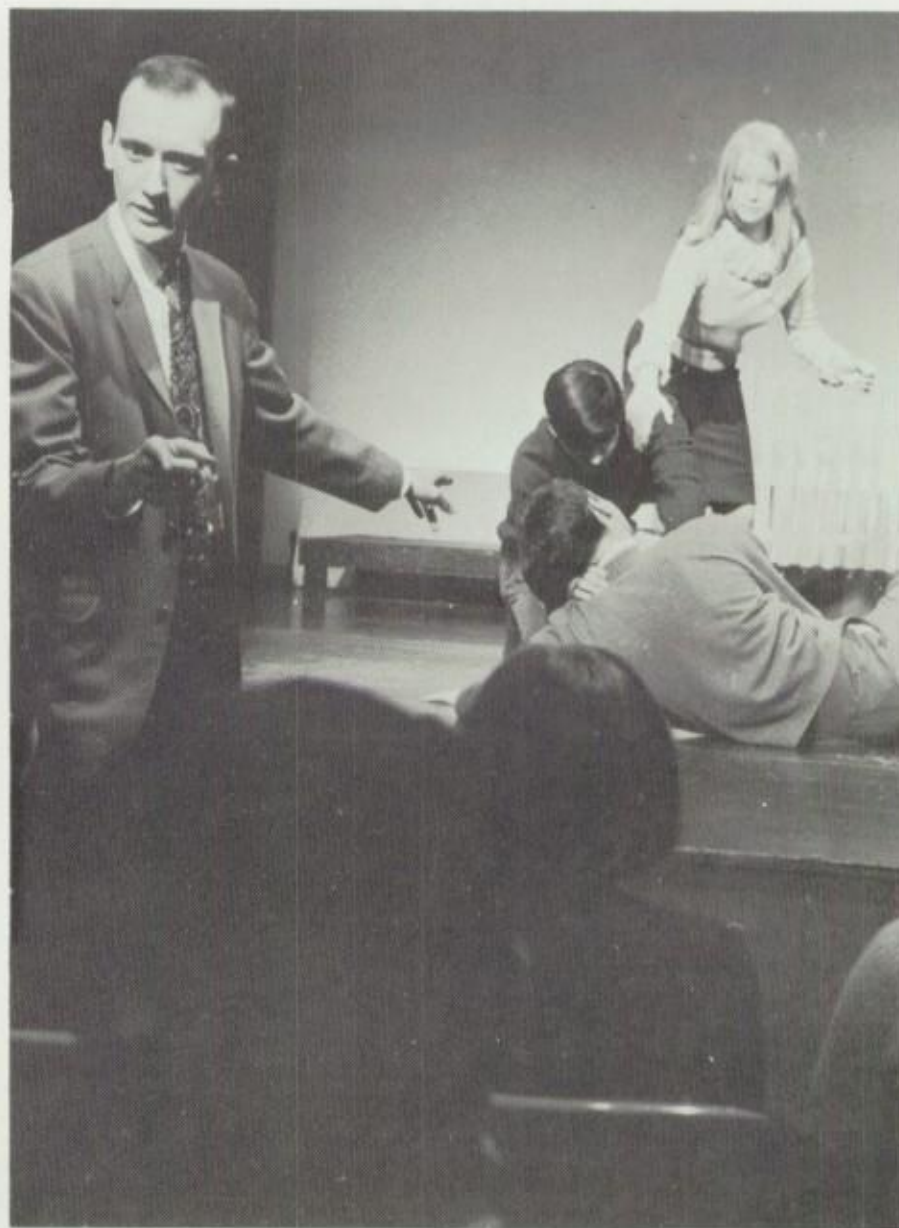

The new dial access system enabled students to listen to taped lectures and speeches, and to view prepared presentations on video tapes in "wet" carrels equipped with TV screens and earphones.

Radio and TV Announcing, a new course, studied sportscasting, newscasting, acting, and script interpretation through on-camera, on-mike performance techniques.

The Speech Arts Department continued to offer a wide range of extra-curricular activities for its students. Members of the Debate Team, who participated in Saturday morning tournaments, developed and expanded their logic and verbal skills in argument and persuasion. Preparation for inter-school speech contests helped students to perfect methods and techniques in elected areas of public speaking.

School plays this year included My Sister Eileen, the South and West School production, and The Solid Gold Cadillac, presented by North and East Schools. All school casts participated in A Man for All Seasons and the musical-drama Brigadoon.

Each school also presented individual programs throughout the year. East School gave "The Charlie Brown Revue," in which freshmen participated in a series of blackouts and repeat performances. North School presented portions of several short plays, among them Luv, by Mark Schisgal, and Shelagh Delaney's A Taste of Honey. West School presented a play and a special Christmas program, and South School held a student-written production in the spring.

Art Department revises honors curriculum, stresses independent study

The Art Department adapted to the new modular scheduling by reorganizing the honors curriculum and art courses. The independent art study program, a semi-college type research plan, was open to exceptionally gifted students of the sophomore through senior level. Students were not scheduled for class sessions, but worked independently and consulted the teacher when necessary. One credit for the course was given for achievement and quality as evaluated by the teacher.

Art honors courses in painting and design met ten mods per week and open labs were available to students wishing to work separately.

ETHS participated in the National Scholastic Art Competition, entering painting and drawing, design, and jewelry displays.

In cooperation with the State Demonstration Center, the Art Department was able to exchange ideas and teachers with other schools in Illinois.

BPE modifies and

The Boys Physical Education Department created a new, improved program to adapt to the modular scheduling this year.

Boys attended class for fifty-five minutes three times a week this year. The department also utilized team teaching, which allowed experienced and less experienced teachers to work together, or one teacher to teach both classes if the other was absent.

The department helped freshman and sophomore boys to develop fundamental skills of various team sports such as baseball, football, and soccer. Juniors and seniors further developed their abilities in archery, badminton, and tennis, while emphasizing individual skill rather than team cooperation.

Health Education, which was mandatory for juniors, studied mental, physical, and emotional areas of health and included a unit on sex education.

The Boys Physical Education Department divided into four schools, with teachers and students classified according to schools. Mr. William Bunn, who has been at ETHS since 1943, planned to retire this year after 25 years.

GPE offers open labs

Melinda Hilton practices serving in Miss Priscilla Henning's 3 Girls Phys Ed class.

The new modular scheduling aided the Girls Physical Education Department in improving its program this year. Girls met for classes two days a week for three modules. In addition, the Girls Physical Education Department offered open labs for the first time. Students who had unscheduled time during special modules were allowed to utilize certain equipment.

The department added a dance-artist-in-residence, Mrs. Shirley Nordine, to work with the Dance Honors class and Esande.

Girls learned the skills of tennis, badminton, and volleyball, while agility in gymnastics, tumbling, and swimming was stressed. Archery, bowling, and golf were continued as special interest sports. First aid and health education expanded on the physical education courses, exploring functions, treatment, and relationships of the human body.

Girls broaden knowledge, insight through Home Economics

New facilities, specialized courses, and opportunities for independent study aided the Home Economics Department in preparing girls for domestic careers.

Improvements in equipment and resources were the results of the new department location. Planning and cooking areas were separate from each other, which increased classroom space for other Home Economics courses. Open labs were utilized by girls who wished to work on special projects.

The courses offered by the Home Economics Department varied so that the student could elect the course which stressed her particular interest.

The beginning course in the Home Economics sequence, 1 Homemaking, placed importance on the individual, in addition to training the student in clothing care and instruction, food preparation, and home care. Parent-daughter relationships were emphasized in 2 Homemaking Lab, and study of the family and family life was basic to 3 Homemaking Lab.

Specialized courses were available to those wishing more knowledge in certain areas. "The Family" studied family relationships and problems and how it affects society; "Home Planning and Furnishing" instructed students in home care and interior decoration. Girls worked in the ETHS Nursery and learned just why preschoolers behave as they do in "Child Development."

Unlike other departments at ETHS, the Industrial Arts Department did not divide into separate school sections. Industrial Arts contained two smaller sections, however. Auto Mechanics was headed by Mr. William Browne, and Mr. Gordon Maves supervised the Print Shop.

Engine Power Technology, which discussed various sources of power, was added to the Industrial Arts curriculum. The new course supplemented beginning and advanced auto mechanics and Service Station Management.

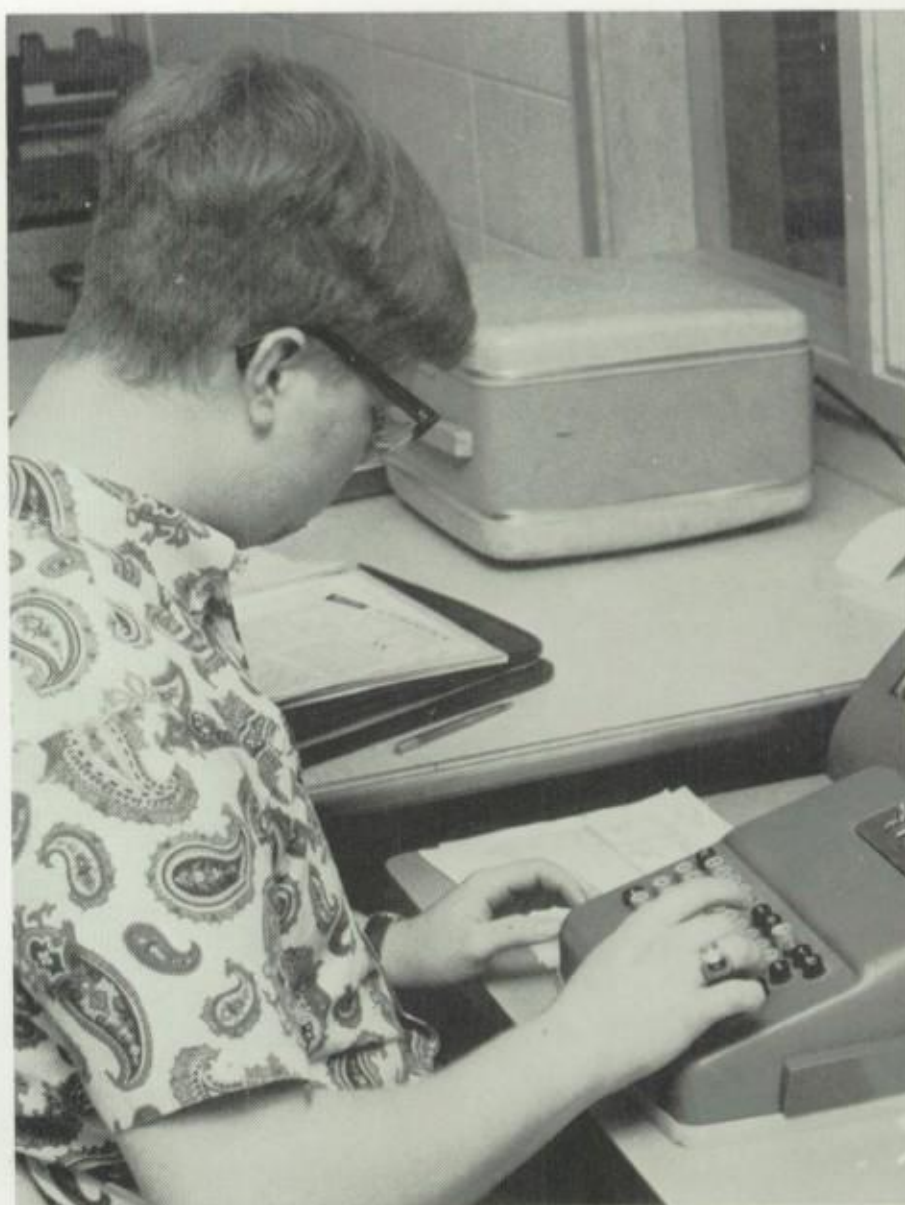

Time was a major factor in adjusting to the new system due to a reduction of class time by one-third to one-half the original allotment. Open labs were provided to make up the deficiency of class time.

The performance criteria approach to grading was adopted by both sections of the Industrial Arts Department. Emphasis was placed on the student's performance in class and how well he handled independent projects.

Business Education Department coordinates performance criteria with courses

With more unscheduled time, students in Business Education this year had more opportunities to develop their practical skills on available machines.

Data Processing team teaching, introduced for the first time this year, used films, lectures, and projectuals as part of the large group instruction. A shorthand learning lab, permitting a class of 30 to take simultaneous dictation at four different speeds, and an experimental class in advanced office procedures providing the student an opportunity to attend class in the morning and work on a salary in a school office in the afternoon, were also some of the additions to the Business Education Department curriculum.

Unlike most of the other sections of the school, the Business Education Department was not divided into different segments for each of the four schools.

Students combine learning and earning through DE, DO, VE

Qualifying students to enter the business world directly upon high school graduation was the main objective of Distributive Education, Diversified Occupations, and Vocational Experience. These courses were offered to juniors and seniors who wished to combine their school work with practical on-the-job training.

DE prepared students for careers in the marketing and distribution of goods, while emphasizing attitudes, skills, and personality development. Students worked 15 to 30 hours a week in jobs relating to retail and wholesale business, finance, and service trades.

Particularly dealing with skilled training in occupations that were industrial in nature, DO coordinated the technical aspect of the classroom with occupational experience. Extra-curricular activities for the DO student included membership in the Vocational Industrial Clubs of America.

The VE program was designed for students terminating their education on the high school level. Students were employed in local factories and retailing jobs, while the course placed emphasis on personal evaluation.

Driver Education offers Motorcycle Seminar

To combat the rising risks of cycle riding, the Driver Education Department added a Motorcycle Safe Driving Seminar to its curriculum. Offered each semester, the course was mandatory for students wishing to drive motorcycles to school.

Defensive driving and strategy were stressed in the elective laboratory course. Students practiced driving techniques at the wheel of Drivo-Trainers. The driving simulators, implemented by films depicting common road situations, helped students to develop safe-driving habits.

On the range, manipulation of the car was emphasized. Instruction from the teacher via walkie-talkies helped students to perfect parking, passing and turning skills. Progressing to the road and the realistic world of driving, students put practical driving skills into operation.

The classroom phase of Driver Education, which was coordinated with the laboratory phase of the course, was included in the physical education program. The driver's personality, natural laws, effects of alcohol on the driver, and cooperation with other motorists were some of the topics discussed in the classroom course.

Demonstration Center advises and exchanges ideas with other schools

In his private workroom, Alan Nelson demonstrates his sculpting techniques.

The adoption of a modular system in a school the size of ETHS offered new opportunities for the exchange of ideas through the Illinois State Demonstration Center.

Visitors from both elementary and secondary schools in Illinois toured the fine arts departments of ETHS. The one-day visitation program provided an opportunity for the observer to visit classes, talk with teachers, and discuss methods of identification and instruction of the gifted student. The extended visitation program allowed teachers and administrators from other schools to study the ETHS program for a period of four days, with a consultant from ETHS returning as an advisor to the visiting school.

The Demonstration Center, under the direction of Mr. Wallace Smith, received a state grant of $62,000 to continue its exchange program this year. Evanston was one of 23 schools in the state enrolled in the demonstration program.

Library expands and updates materials

The Reader's Guide table provides valuable assistance and information for students working on term papers.

The division into four schools made the library and its materials accessible to a greater number of students. The library was restricted to reference work and specialized research, while the resource centers were used for general and independent study.

Approximately 10,000 volumes were taken from the library and distributed among the four resource centers, while the library added 4,000 titles to its collection. Federal funds were used to supplement and update the library's materials.

The library continued to offer special services to both teachers and students. The professional library aided students doing research for term papers and provided educational materials for teachers. The space-saving microfilm printer and reader was used by the student wishing to read an article in a back issue of a magazine. Students could have copies of illustrations, diagrams, and maps made by the copying machine for a small charge.

Because of the division into four schools, only three of the former six librarians remained in the central library, and each resource center had its own librarian.

The Central library is used by students of all schools during their free modules.

Resource Centers benefit

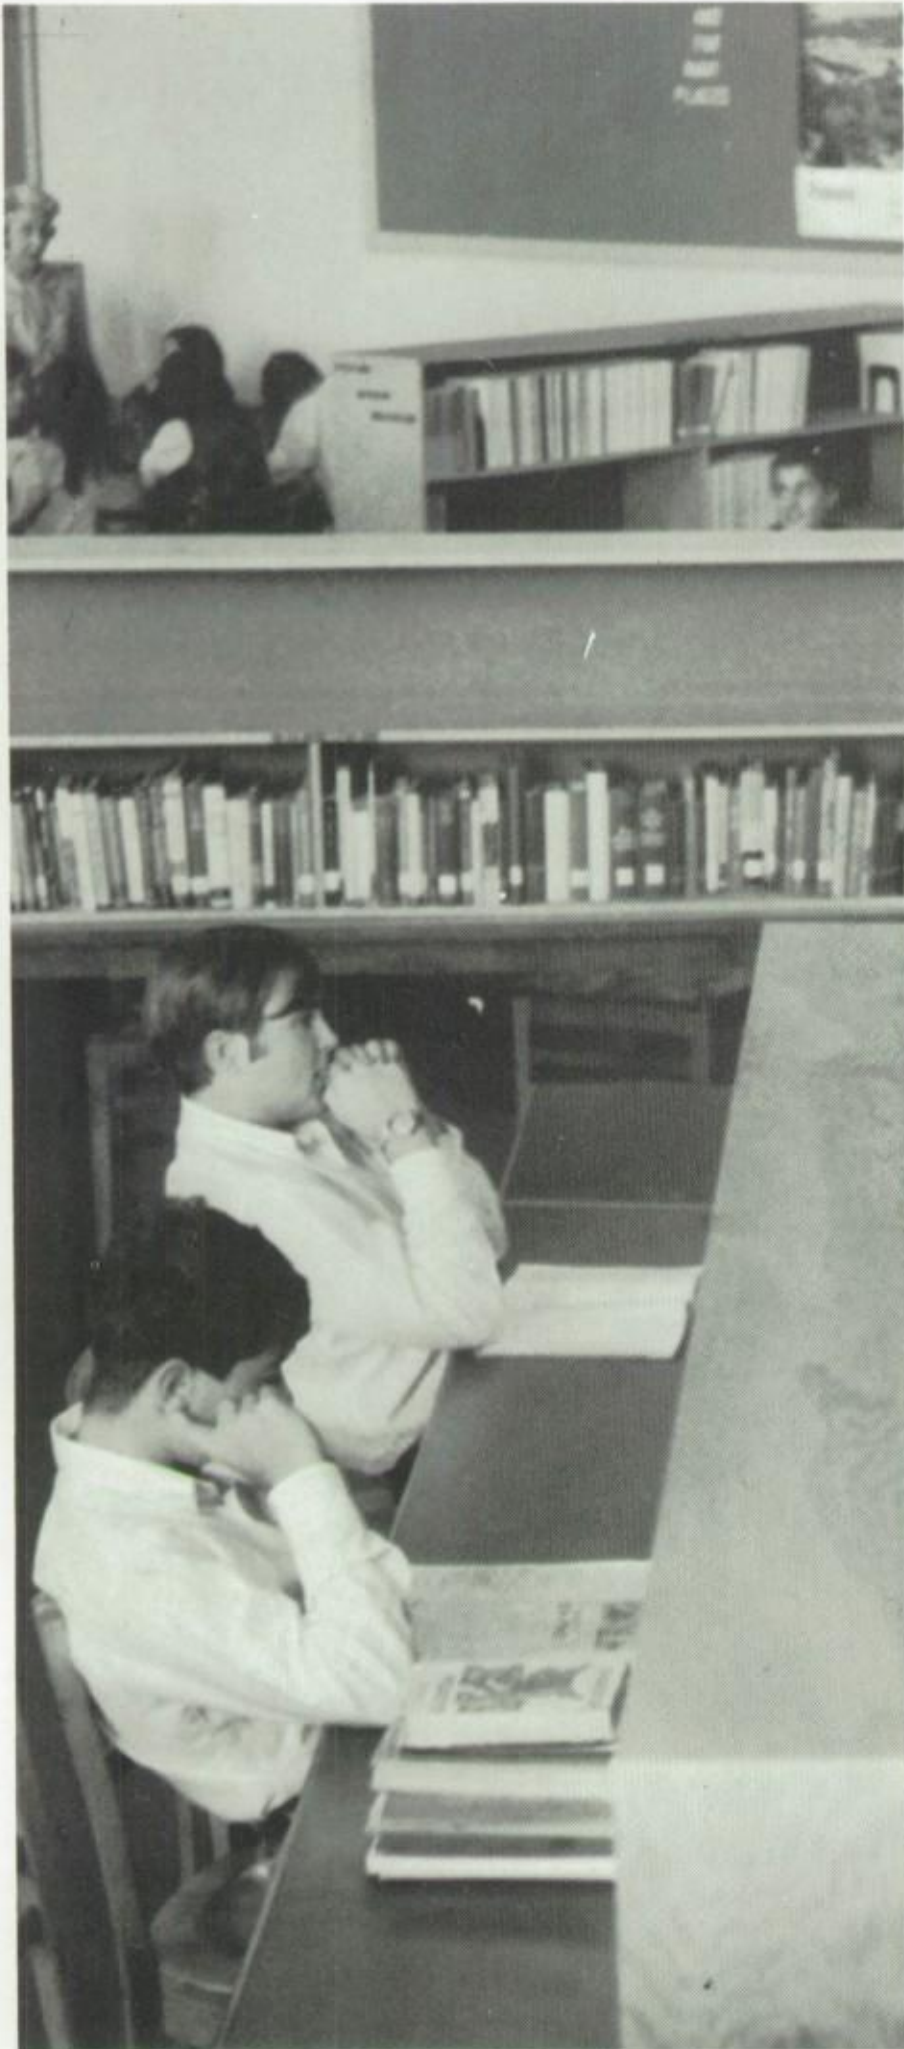

Students, once turned away from an overcrowded library, found a quiet refuge for homework and study in the new resource centers. Teachers were available for students who wished to discuss a problem in their work.

Each resource center contained about 9,000 books, but this was a representative collection of subject materials. Students wishing to do further research were referred to the central library.

The resource centers contained several unique features for both students and teachers. Special committees or groups working on projects were able to discuss plans and exchange ideas in conference rooms where they would not disturb other students. Teachers were able to prepare dittos and assignments in the teachers' workrooms.

Various services were offered by each resource center. East School's APC terminal computer unit could be used in the East Resource Center by students from all four schools. North School suggested ideas and themes for the display in front of the library. The South School Resource Center, which was not opened until January, processed pamphlets for all four schools, and West School ordered supplies for the resource centers.

Students were able to obtain assignments, information sheets, and diagnostic tests from file cabinets in the resource centers. Film strips, tape recorders, record players, and other audio-visual equipment could be signed out of resource centers for special assignments.

The advantages of the old South School Resource Center are contemplated by Mark Franczyk.

A new counseling program to increase student-counselor communication was initiated this year in East, West, and South Schools. Students in North School were able to see their counselors by appointment.

Group counseling periods were held once every two or three weeks by East, West, and South School counselors. Students discussed problems with courses and the modular schedule while gaining a new understanding of their relationship to ETHS. Students were encouraged to express their opinions and at the same time learned to communicate with others.

South, West, and North Schools employed the vertical counseling system, which allowed each counselor to guide a portion of the students from each grade level. East School remained on the horizontal counseling system, with one counselor assigned to each class.

Counselors set up schedules, organized programs, and guided both college-bound students and those ending their education on the high school level. Counselors, who had previously been responsible to Mr. Charles Mader of the main office, were officially coordinated by the individual school principals.

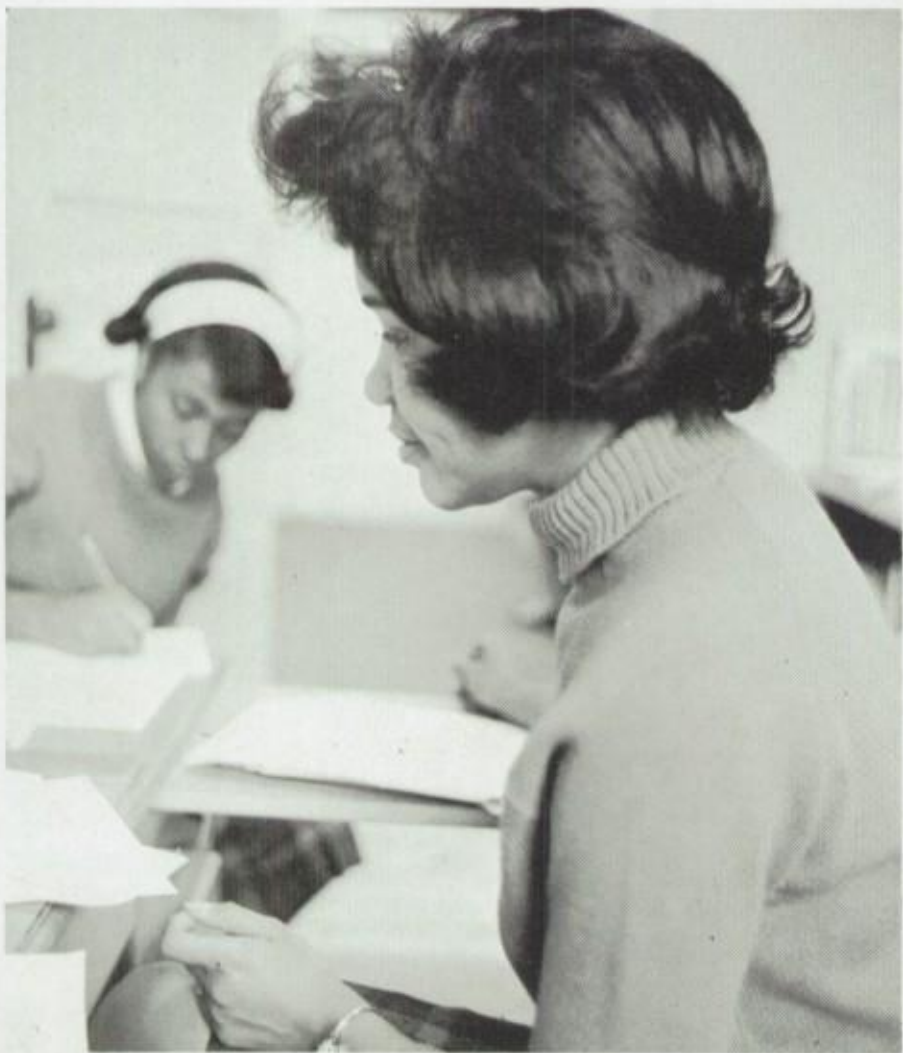

Problems in school communication are discussed by Alan Chelnick and Steve Schacht during their counseling period with Mrs. Dorothy Magett.

Special Services meets

Special Services, by working with a wide variety of students with different needs and problems, played an important part in ETHS life during the past year.

Among the programs offered by Special Services were home and hospital teaching. Students who were to be out of school for an indefinite length of time were sent a teacher who assisted them in their studies. In this way, the student was able to keep up with his class work.

Students with impaired hearing were taught lip reading to permit easier communication with others. Many of these students attended regular classes as well as the specialized class in which they were able to use audiometers, tapes, and earphones.

For those students with speech impediments, Special Services organized speech correction classes for their benefit. Video tapes, dictographs, and other equipment were used to correct speech problems. Blind students were able to use Braille books and Braille writers to keep up with their studies.

Social workers guided students with special problems and were available to help students throughout the year.

ORGANIZATIONS

Central Council unites a divided ETHS

Students crowd into the Social Hall to see "King Kong," one of the movies sponsored by Central Council.

The division of ETHS into separate schools challenged Central Council to adapt to a four-school system and the changes it demanded.

John O'Brien headed the student governing body in uniting ETHS, aiding the four schools in their various activities, and guiding the entire student body. Central Council also acted as the interpreting body for communications between the administration and students.

Because more responsibility has been placed on school councils, the size of CC was reduced from 13 to 11 persons. The organization became more informal, and decisions were determined by the majority vote of the body. The duties of secretary and treasurer were combined into one office, and 8 of the 13 committees were transferred to individual school councils.

Central Council sponsored various programs throughout the year. In the fall, CC helped orientate freshmen and out-of-state students to ETHS. The New Folk concert, which was held in October, was attended by 750 students. Jim Purnell and Bob Pickens of the Chicago Bears spoke at the Homecoming pep rally through the efforts of CC. A series of movies including "Desert Rat" and "King Kong" were shown several Thursdays throughout the year as a service to students.

Central Council continued to sponsor Hi-Lites, Yamo, the Lost and Found, the Senior Class Cheer Section, and the CC Loyalty Committee.

East School organizations sponsor projects for students

Special projects were taken on by the East School Council, Quadrangle, and Girls Club as ETHS stressed the importance of individual schools.

The East School Council met once a week to stimulate ideas and improve loyalty and services in East School. Board membership increased, with representatives from reg periods added to the Council.

Projects were initiated to serve the student. The East School Council sponsored a tutor-tutee program, opened a school store, and conducted a slogan contest to promote spirit and unity. This year the Council participated in an exchange program with other high schools in order to view their different atmospheres.

Girls Club in East School also emphasized service projects this year. Senior girls acted as "Big Sisters" and guided bewildered freshmen, solving their problems and answering questions. The Girls Club Board also increased its size, adding five girls for each grade level. Headed by Andrea Rose, Girls Club held bake sales and entered a booth in the annual carnival to raise money for other projects.

Quadrangle formed a monitor system, initiated by Jim Halla. A committee chose upper-classmen to work in the lounge, student activities office, school store, and to maintain discipline in the halls. Activities backed by Quadrangle included a battle of the bands, a March of Dimes service project, and a ribbon sale to raise money.

Together, Girls Club and Quadrangle held the sock hop, "Basketball Bash," after the Niles West basketball game, and a similar dance in February after the New Trier East game.

"North points the way"

North School pointed the way toward service projects, social events, and student activities with the enthusiasm of active members.

The North School Council, under the leadership of Chip Gibbs, outdid themselves in their Thanksgiving Canned Foods Drive by surpassing their goal of 1260 cans by 600. Taking the place of the traditional loyalty and spirit committees, the Pep Club and the Student Activities Information Board were organized. Projects such as welcoming alumni and selling bumper stickers were undertaken. Join-Up Week, Freshman Orientation, and the North School Personality-of-the-Month were also implemented by the Council.

Taking underprivileged children to see the museums, the city Christmas lights, and other attractions of Chicago was a year-round project for North School Girls Club, headed by Eve Halperin. A new system of representation, consisting of a House of Representatives, a Senate, and an executive branch, increased participation in the Girls Club activities. Among the Girls Club social projects were the Turnabout, "Signs of our Time," and a Mother-Daughter Luncheon.

Led by Barry Lifschultz, the North School Quadrangle provided entertainment for the Homecoming Dance, "Flower Power." An extensive hall guard system was also established by Quadrangle. Presenting a school movie and distributing spirit ribbons were other projects backed by Quadrangle.

Sue Skoner and Bob Johnson read their horoscopes at the Turnabout Dance, "Signs of Our Times," sponsored by North School.

South celebrates opening of new school

Service projects highlighted the activities of South School Council, Girls Club, and Quadrangle this year.

South School Council, directed by Dave Didrikson, helped raise funds for Project Concern which provided money for refugee hospitals in Viet Nam. A South School donkey dressed as a reindeer visited West School at Christmastime. In February, South School sponsored an all-school pep assembly that was written, directed, and produced by South School students.

In keeping with the tradition of leap year, South School sponsored a Sadie Hawkins Day grub dance with a jug band on February 24.

The Council, because of the division of ETHS, reorganized this year. Reg room representatives acted as the legislative body of South School. Committee chairmen were chosen for the various Council committees. South Council also appointed senior honor guards to maintain discipline in the cafeteria.

Under president Sue Moore, Girls Club sponsored the Turnabout "Signs of Our Time." Girls participated in the annual "Santa's Workshop," making toys and candy favors for orphans. South School Girls Club held a sock hop to celebrate the opening of the new South School. Girls Club also sold pompoms at football games and raised funds by bake sales.

Quadrangle, led by Jerry Neiberg, delivered Christmas cards and valentines through Quadrangle post office. South Quadrangle also provided refreshments at the Homecoming Dance, "Flower Power."

West School invaded by turkey and reindeer

With increased responsibility placed on individual schools because of the division of ETHS, West School Council, Quadrangle, and Girls Club expanded the activities offered to its students.

Over $1,000 was raised for the Peace Corps by the annual candy sale in West School, and students attended a candy party by purchasing a candy bar at the door. The Council also sponsored a faculty-student basketball game.

During Thanksgiving, students participated in a pumpkin carving, pie-baking, and pie-eating contest. Animals invaded West School when the students kept a live turkey in their lounge during Thanksgiving and a donkey dressed as a reindeer before Christmas.

The West School Council also formed a Student Citizenship Board to review students' demerits. The Council increased its membership and elected twelve new representatives.

Under the leadership of Peg Van Bussum, West School Girls Club formed volunteer committees and a planning board. A point system was initiated which awarded girls points as they took part in each project.

Six boys from each class in West School met weekly this year to plan Quadrangle activities. Pin-it and ribbon sales helped raise funds for intramurals. Headed by President Chris Cain, boys collected for the March of Dimes in January, and ushered at special events at the high school.

West Quadrangle helped insure the delivery of Christmas cards and valentines by participating in the annual Quadrangle Post Office.

Language Clubs stress culture

Movies, guest speakers, and visits to exotic restaurants highlighted the activities of French, Italian, and Latin Clubs this year.

Students who had spent the summer in Belgium spoke at the October meeting of French Club, illustrating their reports with souvenirs, slides, and periodical literature. At the French Club Christmas party, students saw the movie, "Le Souppirant" or "The Suitor." Sponsored by Miss Sylvia Rothschild, French Club attended a dinner at a French restaurant at the end of the year.

Italian Club, sponsored by Mr. Robert Kiefer, presented the film, "Ulysses," in December with Latin Club. An Italian conversational group involving Italian students and Northwestern faculty members was initiated by Italian Club this year. Dinner at an exclusive Italian restaurant climaxed the year's activities.

Spanish, German and Spanish, German, and Russian students learned about the cultures of the countries they were studying at regular monthly meetings and special activities of the language clubs.

Spanish Club, sponsored by Miss Martha McNutt, welcomed foreign students who talked about their homeland. The club also presented skits and held a Christmas party. At one meeting students duplicated the atmosphere of a Spanish nightclub.

German Club had guest speakers who spoke on the German culture and carolled through neighborhoods at Christmas time. Members of German Club were also able to visit a German restaurant that featured singing waiters. Mr. Elmer Marthole sponsored the organization.

In addition to monthly meetings, Russian Club held conversation meetings where students discussed current events and books they had read. Russian Study Club, directed by Mrs. Valentina Dziubinsky, visited the New York Ballet and a Russian restaurant. The club also published a newspaper in both English and Russian.

Science Clubs explore the physical and the man-made

For students interested in natural and man-made phenomena, science clubs provided a creative outlet for the exchange of ideas and increased knowledge.

The 30 members of Math-Science Club worked on projects during the year which were exhibited at the Illinois Academy of Sciences and various science fairs. The club, which hosted several guest speakers, met every Tuesday.

Radio Club offered boys an opportunity to work on radio sets, discuss radio theories, and practice codes. Several boys were able to earn their amateur licenses through this organization. Radio Club Field Day climaxed the year's events, at which time boys operated radio equipment in disaster conditions.

A field trip to Yerkes Observatory in Wisconsin allowed members of Astronomy Club to gain a better understanding of the celestial bodies. The club published a paper "Ymon-ortsa" which is astronomy spelled backwards, under the sponsorship of Mr. Samuel Dell'Aria, and held a banquet in the spring.

Students in Computer Club studied FORTRAN, the coded "language" of machines, and operated the new APL computer terminal unit in East Resource Center which connected ETHS to New York. Movies and instruction in computer principles highlighted Computer Club meetings.

Telecomm Corps, newly formed this year, was open to any student interested in various areas of telecommunication. Unit managers conducted meetings and training sessions for new students, who after passing a test, could aid in data retrieval and the production of films and tapes. Bud Palmer, formerly with CBS, lectured students on advertising and filming.

Small Clubs concerned with international, community, personal problems

Internationally and community-oriented small clubs stressed self-understanding and tolerance of other ethnic groups and cultures.

International Round Table, sponsored by Mr. Bernard Mattson, discussed problems of international, national, and local concern. Mr. Thomas Sharp and Mr. William Siavelis spoke at a meeting of the Club, and Mr. Eruc Grimway, a member of the Rotary International, spoke on why we should not be in Viet Nam. The Club, which has been in existence since 1938, is unique in that it is purely a discussion group.

Cosmopolitan Club, which is for the foreign students at ETHS, participated in the "Ten Flags Over Evanston" program last fall. At the Christmas party, students told fortunes, sang Christmas carols, and listened to various types of Christmas music. Cosmopolitan Club was sponsored by Mrs. Marjorie Burkland.

Human Relations Council held "salt and pepper" parties and after school people gatherings while discussing problems at ETHS. Members of Human Relations Council participated in a parent-teacher-student program through which they met with Evanston officials to talk about community problems. Sophomores worked with children from Dewey, Central, and Foster Schools for Project Headstart.

Progressions of '68, an all-senior organization, co-operated with Human Relations Council in directing parties to improve relations between ETHS students.

Career Conference held a Career Film Festival this year showing films relating to areas of nursing, data processing, radiology, law, and engineering. Representatives from various fields of business, industry, and technical institutions lectured to students and their speeches were recorded for later use in carrels in the resource centers. In this way, Career Conference was able to build up a collection of audio-visual equipment for a Career library.

leadership and independence

The Combined Studies Councils, Debate Teams, and Future Teachers Club helped students to develop their leadership abilities while growing as individuals.

The Combined Studies Councils sponsored a "Welcome Freshman" party, Family Night, theater parties, and end of the year picnic. Students visited Deerfield High School which has a program similar to the Combined Studies approach of ETHS. The C.S. Council also published a Newsletter which contained information regarding individuals, essays, and creative writing.

The Debate Teams chose as their topic this year: "Resolved: That Congress should establish uniform regulations to control criminal investigation procedures." Four Evanston debaters participated in an Oxford-style debate at the Tournament of Champions at New Trier East, relying primarily on the use of wit and sarcasm for their effectiveness. The topic was: "The Flower Children: Are they annual or perennial?"

Future Teachers Club explored various fields of teaching while guiding members with career choices. Miss Annette Tosig lectured on elementary education and representatives from the National College of Educational and Northwestern University discussed the differences between a teaching college and a large university. Future Teachers Club, sponsored by Miss Eileen Gamble, entered a booth in the Girls Club Carnival.

Bands and Orchestras stress group rehearsals

Mr. William Idle directs the ETHS Marching Band in the playing of the National Anthem.

New schedules and more opportunities to perform combined to make the bands and orchestras a more familiar and functional part of ETHS.

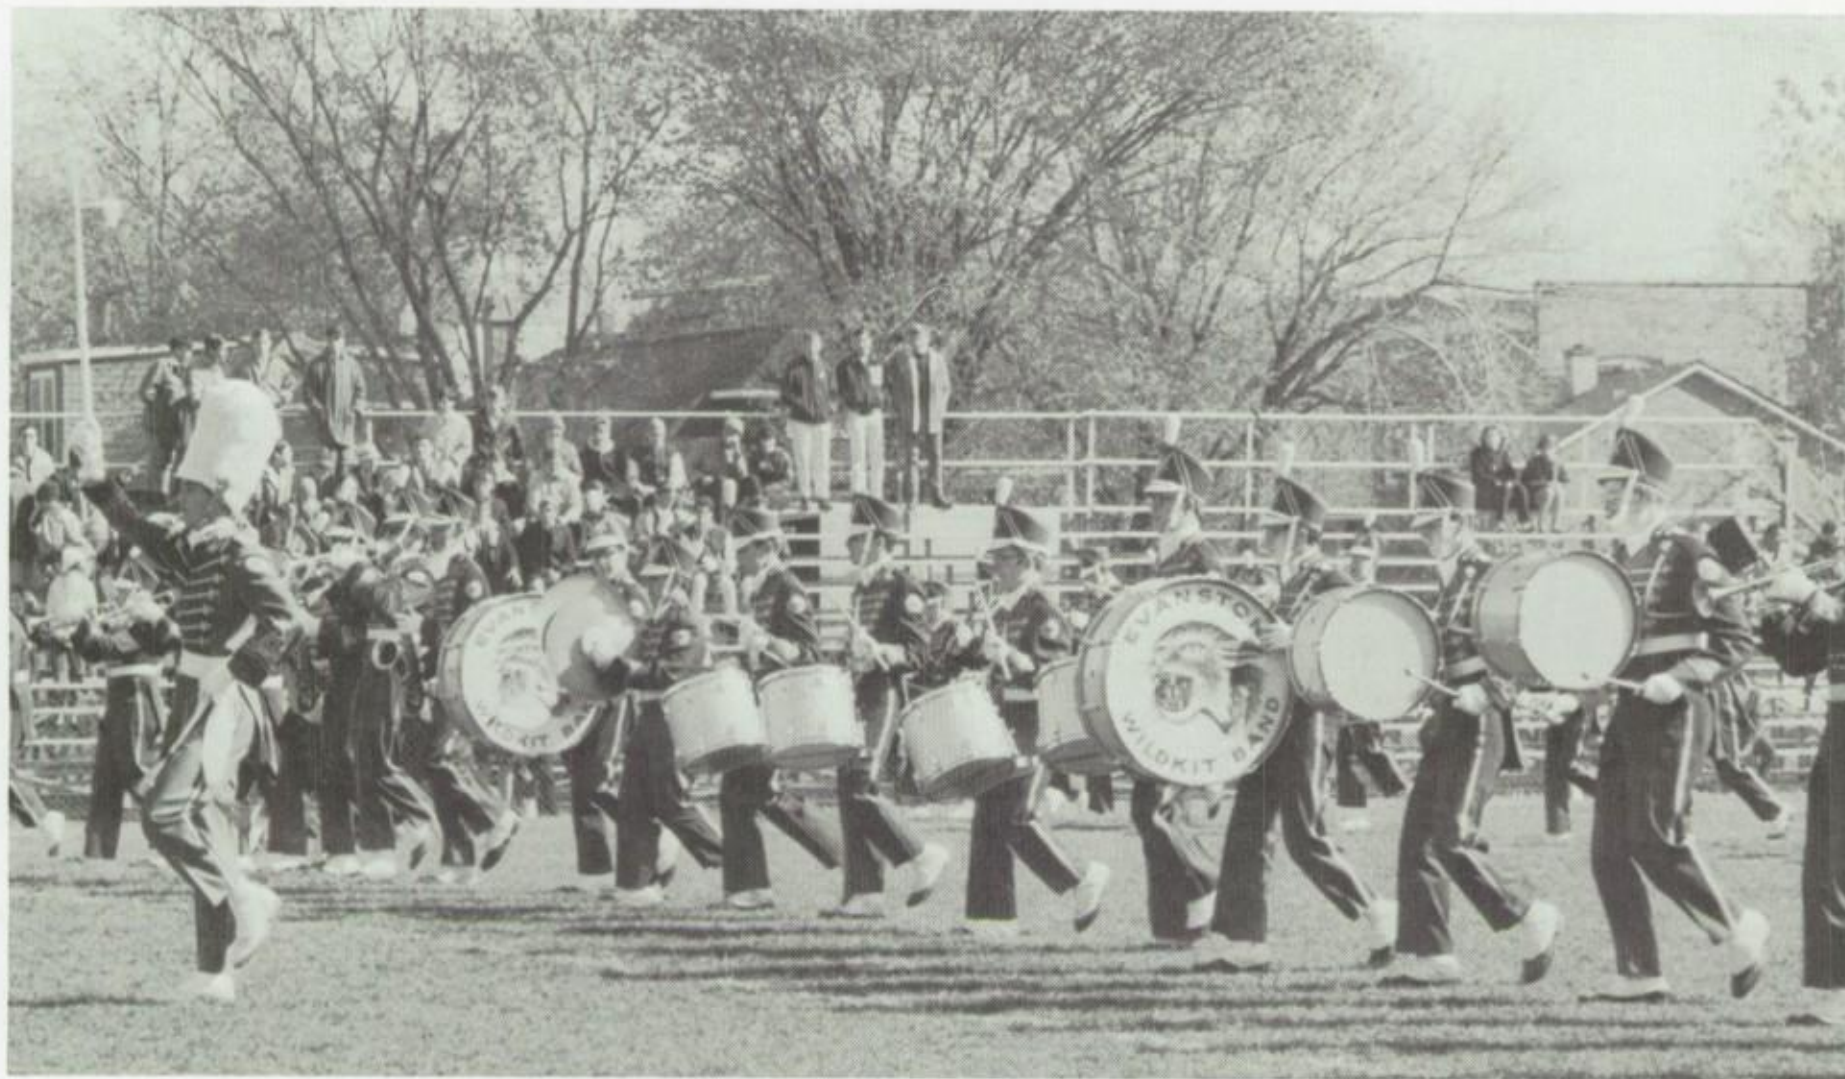

Because classes were held only three times a week rather than every day, a new emphasis was placed on large group rehearsals.

The orchestra, directed by Mr. Alvin Mistak, accompanied the chorus to the Bach cantata, "For Us a Child is Born," at the South School Christmas Festival. The orchestra also appeared at the annual Band and Orchestra Concert in January and the Spring Music Festival. The Symphony Orchestra accompanied the cast to Lerner and Loewe's Brigadoon.

The ETHS Marching Band, conducted by Mr. William Idle, performed at the four home football games, the Homecoming Pep Rally, and the Northwestern Homecoming Parade. The Concert Band, also conducted by Mr. Idle, and the Cadet Band, directed by Mr. Donald Owens, performed in the Christmas and Spring music festivals and the Band and Orchestra Concert. Under the direction of Mr. Idle, the Dance Band studied music in the jazz idiom, and performed at the South School Christmas festival and Daddy-Daughter Dinner Dance.

Choral groups expand vocal skills

ETHS Choir members Susan Astolfi and Wendy Rose sing Christmas carols in the main lobby.

Vocal groups within ETHS explored contemporary music and provided opportunities for increased participation while developing a new musical perspective.

In the relaxed atmosphere of Folksinging Club, students learned to listen to and enjoy different types of folk music. Students wrote their own lyrics and then performed for other club members. Folksinging Club published a monthly paper, the "7th String," which contained record and book reviews, editorials, and concert schedules.

Directed by Mr. Richard Rosewall, the ETHS Choir provided opportunities for students to enrich their vocal experience through individual and group participation.

Contemporary Christmas music and Spanish carols highlighted the choir's presentation at the annual Christmas festival. In addition, they performed for the Rotary Club and caroled through the halls at Christmas time. The sixty members of the Choir studied music ranging from the traditional classics to the more percussive ensembles.

Mastersingers, chosen from junior and senior boys in chorus, was directed by Mr. Donald Stromberg. By studying challenging music ranging from a Bach chorale to the "Winter Song," Mastersingers were able to develop their singing abilities to the fullest. While appearing at the Homecoming game, and the Christmas and Spring Music Festivals, Mastersingers were given an opportunity to demonstrate their musical abilities. Mastersingers also participated in the West School production of the medieval tragedy Herod.

Girl's Choir, under the direction of Miss Helen Keith, allowed interested junior and senior girls to further their chorus experience. Their performance in the annual Christmas festival was highlighted by a selection by Benjamin Britten, accompanied by a harp.

Directed by Mr. Avon Gillespie, Troubadours were selected by audition from boys in freshman and sophomore chorus classes who were interested in a more complete study of music. Troubadours sang at a concert December 9 at the Museum of Science and Industry, and also participated in the South School music program in January. Troubadours also performed at the Mather Home and caroled at Christmas assemblies.

In Mrs. Betty Jacobson's Madrigal group, freshman and sophomore girls were selected from chorus classes by auditions based on sight-reading. These girls were given a chance to develop their music potential within this group.

Nancy Espenshade and Kathy Devery practice synchronized swimming for the spring Aquette Show.

The spring water show and the annual dance concert culminated a year of work for members of Aquettes and Esande.

Directed by Mrs. Ann Stevens, the 67 girls in Aquettes practiced routines in synchronized swimming every Wednesday after school. The girls exhibited their talents at the annual spring water show, which had as its theme, water and its role in history. Tryouts were held in the fall and girls were accepted on the basis of skill.

The 25 members of Esande met every Tuesday and Thursday, while the newly formed Esande board met on Wednesdays.

The girls practiced dance techniques and routines while a guest dance artist-in-residence demonstrated new steps, enriching the skills already mastered.

Esande held its annual dance concert on March 2, which featured original choreographic compositions.

Members of small clubs at ETHS found an opportunity to develop their talents, make friends, and serve the school. The Bridge Club, headed by Marc Dorfman and sponsored by Mr. Michael Bennett, provided instruction for the beginner and competition for the experienced player.

Members of Chess Club participated in inter-school matches and the Rockford Invitational Meet, where chess teams from all over the state compete. Sponsored by Mr. Robert Anspaugh, the membership and interest in the club increased.

The Pilot, the student handbook which provides a reference to school activities and a general directory of high school life, was edited by Ken Walchak and sponsored by Mr. Robert Workman. The publication included a brief ETHS history, a calendar of events for the year, statements of school policy, a listing of the extra curricular activities at ETHS, and Senior Awards.

In this year's budget ticket sales, 76.3 percent of the students bought tickets. South school led the total sales with 82 percent, followed by East School with 77 percent. Profits from budget tickets were used to finance student activities. Students owning budget ticket were admitted to all home athletic events, received the Key, and had a subscription to the Evanstonian.

Compiling an anthology of outstanding student writing from the past four years was a new project of the Writer's Club. Under the sponsorship of Mrs. Marie Claire Davis, Writer's Club produced Word Mosaics, a monthly publication of exceptional student work, and writer's Showcase, which represents student writing through music, art, and drama at a spring presentation.

Students donated free time to serve ETHS in the main library and resource centers. The Library Club, directed by Miss Mary Ann Swanson, attended a luncheon in the spring. The luncheon, sponsored by the High School Librarians of Chicago, honored high school library assistants.

Evanstonian, Key, adapt to division of ETHS

Sue Fox and Naomi Siefman double check faculty names for the Academics Section of the Key.

New offices highlighted two of Evanston's student publications this year. The Evanstonian and the Key adjusted to a changing ETHS by moving into temporary offices while awaiting the completion of the publications suite in 1968.

The Evanstonian moved its office-complex to the old Health Service room after 27 years in room 174. Headed by editor-in-chief Jane Dillinger, the Evanstonian aimed to uphold the All-American and Medalist ratings received in 1967. With a circulation of 5,300, the Evanstonian is the most widely-read high school newspaper in the United States.

In adjusting to the new ETHS organization of four schools within one, the Evanstonian revised its news staff. An editor was assigned to each school, with one head news editor compiling stories.

Mr. John Reque, who has sponsored the Evanstonian for seven years, took a leave of absence from ETHS in 1968.

The Key staff produced its 17th volume in a small publications office in East School. Mr. Ronald Markwell, the new advisor, guided the staff through a year of change. Using the theme "Unity Through Division," Editor-in-chief Marilyn Moore, with the help of six senior editors, produced the 1968 Key.

Also new this year was the method of staff selection for the Key. A series of training sessions were held, which resulted in the selection of 15 juniors. The 1968-69 editorial staff was selected after spring training sessions.

New elections and "Flower

The new queen, Sue Moore, proudly accepts an autographed football from co-captains Stan Helm and Sandy Champion.

Homecoming '67 sparkled with new enthusiasm as ETHS students united in merging old traditions with the vibrant new.

Excited Evanstonians flocked to Memorial Field for the pep rally and initiation of the weekend's festivities. Students welcomed guest speakers Bob Pickens and Jim Purnell of the Chicago Bears and were entertained by the "Fabulous Five," a local combo.

In conjunction with the theme, "Advertisements," the North School sophomore float, "Breakfast of Champions," took first place.

Concluding the pep rally, football co-captains Stan Helm and Sandy Champion presented Homecoming Queen Sue Moore with the traditional autographed football.

Entitled ETHS Through the Looking Glass or What's a Nice Show Like You Doing in a School Like This?, Yamo '67 was a mixture of new and old representing the work of over 400 students from all four schools. Although much of the show's humor was aimed at the new school, several skits and blackouts satirized the old. Others included vaudeville shows, Candid Camera, the musical lectures of Herbert Zipper and Leonard Bernstein, and the culinary art of Julia Child. The Yamo Chorus and Dance Company, Esande, and a series of individual acts completed Yamo's tenth anniversary production.

Kurt Westerberg, serving as both General Chairmand and Orchestra Director, worked with Script Chairman Tim Landfield and the rest of Yamo Board in producing the show. The sets were designed and constructed by Mr. Robert Proper and Mr. Bruce Siewerth, faculty spnsor.

Red-checked tableclothes, spaghetti, strolling musicians, and Italian landscapes set the mood for "Una Festa in Italia," this year's Daddy Daughter Dinner Dance. Sponsored by North School Girls Club, the dinner dance was held on March 8, in the school cafeterias.

East and South cafeterias provided the atmosphere for spaghetti dinners. Candlelight, decorations, and strolling violin and accordion players enhanced the Italian setting.

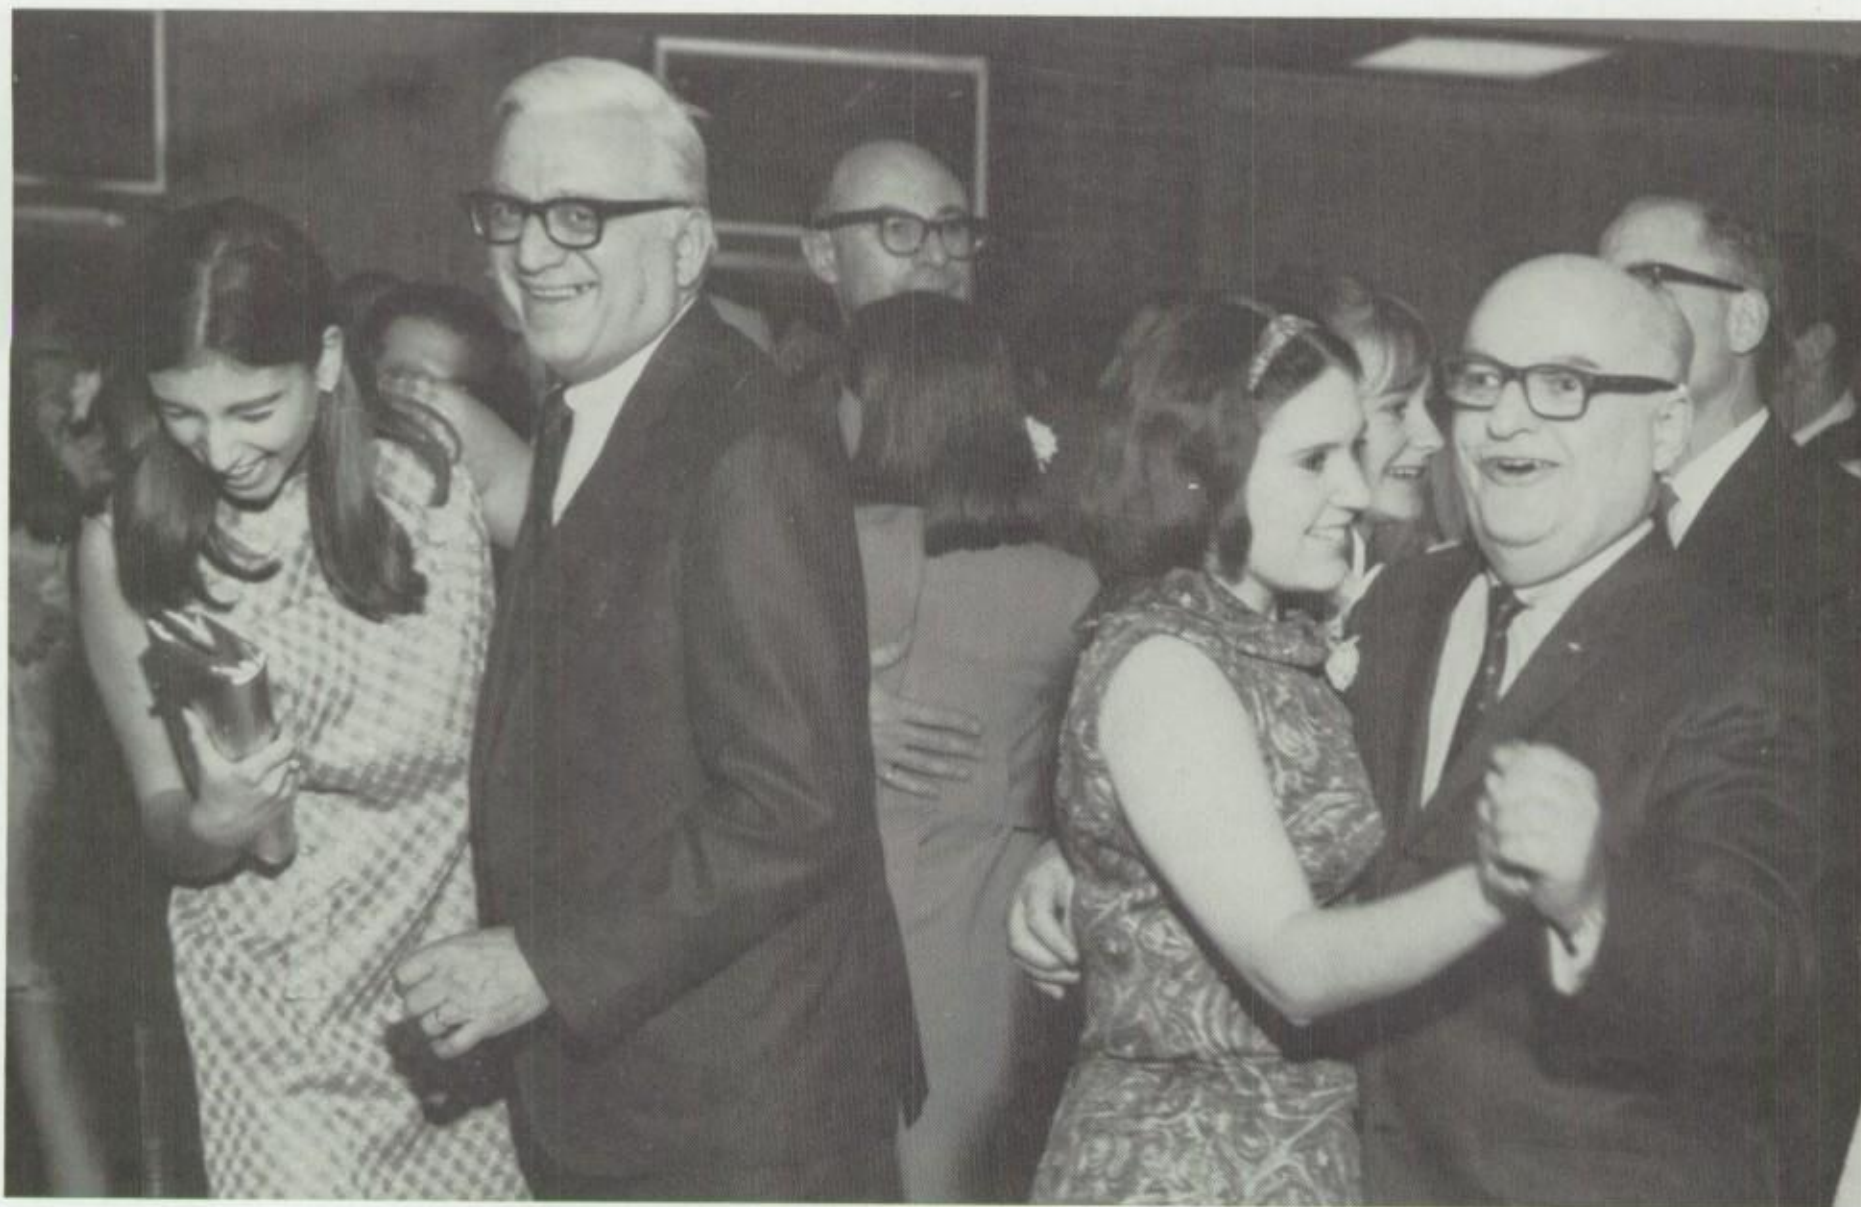

After dinner, dads and daughters moved to North School cafeteria for dancing and entertainment. Dancing ranged from the Bunny Hop to the Boogaloo as the generation gap was bridged. During a break in the dancing, daddy-daughter acts displayed family talent. At one point in the evening, a hypnotist was featured, and dads and daughters watched their friends be hypnotized. Refreshments were served in North School lounge, and daddies and daughters relaxed between dances.

As an added feature, Photo Service took pictures of couples against Italian landscape backgrounds. A framed photograph was a fitting souvenir of an eventful evening.

Traditions and changes mark Christmas 1967

Girls in "Santa's Workshop" make ornaments for hospitalized children.

Christmas at ETHS this year was a unique blend of familiar traditions and exciting changes. A school divided was drawn together in a Christmas spirit that pervaded the halls, Christmas parties, and club meetings. Students from every school stopped to warm up at the crackling fireplace; choirs carolled through the corridors; and students, teachers, and alumni all admired the Christmas tree in the lobby.

Based on "Legends," the traditional evergreen was decorated with gilded apples of the Druids, Christmas stars, candle lights, and fruits of trees and vines, each detail recalling a legend or myth.

South School, promising a reindeer and a surprise for the Christmas season, astonished West School with a live donkey plus cardboard antlers.

South School Girl's Club held the annual "Santa's Workshop" to make bright Christmas trinkets for hospitalized children. Library, Cosmopolitan, and Folksinging Clubs celebrated the holiday season, as did French, Latin, German, and Spanish Clubs.

East backs first sock hop

East School sponsored a candy sale this year similar to that in West School. The East School Store was opened by the Council, and a slogan contest helped promote school spirit. Students from East were able to participate with nearby high schools to observe the different atmospheres and meet students from other schools.

East School competed against North School in the Turkey Trot, but was unsuccessful in defeating North School in tricycle racing and passing grapefruits chin to chin. A sock hop, "Basketball Bash," was co-sponsored by East School Quadrangle and Girls Club.

Senior girls signed up as "Big Sisters" to freshman girls, guiding them with their problems. Bake sales and an East School booth in the carnival highlighted Girls Club activities in East School.

Quadrangle provided hall honor guards and sold spirit ribbons in East School. The juniors held a class party with a combo at the end of the year.

North School proved more adept than East School at passing grapefruits chin to chin when they defeated East School at the Turkey Trot. Other events included shopping cart races, double bicycle racing, and tricycle relays at the Turkey Trot which was sponsored by both schools.

North School held a Thanksgiving canned foods drive and surpassed their goal of 1260 by 600 cans. At Christmastime, teachers donated candy and toys for the orphans' Christmas party, which was sponsored by North School juniors.

North School Council raffled a tape recorder and held a bumper sticker sale to raise funds for North School.

The Council also formed a Pep Club to boost school spirit and a Student Activities Information Board.

South School dedicated, opened to students

South School, the last to be completed, was dedicated and the cornerstone officially laid on October 21, 1967.

Reverend Karl H. Brevick gave the invocation which was followed by an address by Dr. Frederic Lake, Dr. Lloyd Michael, and Dr. James Elliot. Sue Moore, South School Girls Club President, and Dave Didriksen, president of South School, also spoke at the assembly. A strongbox containing a Pilot, daily bulletin, and a South School pin was included in the cornerstone.

South School students were promised a reindeer and a surprise for the Christmas holidays by South School Council. The Council did not disappoint the students when a fat donkey with antlers and striped scarf stood in West School, rather than a reindeer. The donkey, a South School donation, posted the sign, "I am a West School reindeer."

The Council backed Project Concern, which collected money for Viet Nam orphans. A sock hop was held to celebrate the opening of the new South School in January. Quadrangle insured prompt delivery of Christmas cards and valentines through its post office.

West School raised over $1,000 for the Peace Corps in Brazil through its annual candy sale. A parking permit was awarded to the senior and junior five-man teams who sold the most candy. The top sophomore and freshman salesman received an all-school student pass.

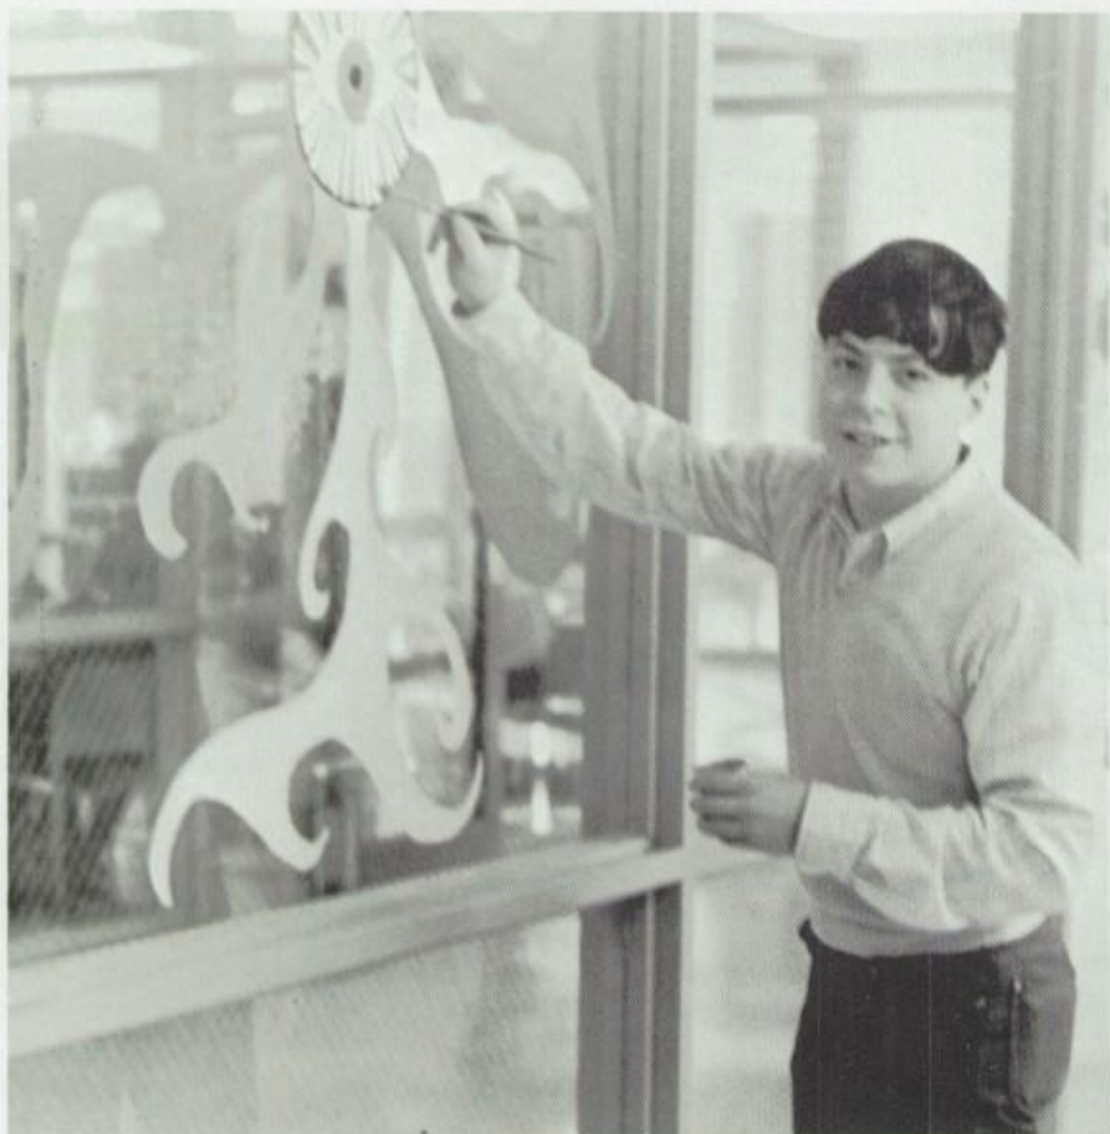

During Thanksgiving, students kept a live turkey in the lounge and held a pie-baking and pie-eating contest. Girls Club made felt boards for Project Headstart, helped construct the Homecoming float and carolled at Fountain Square at Christmas time.

Quadrangle sold spirit ribbons and pin-it buttons to raise funds for intramurals.

East and North present comedy, THE SOLID GOLD CADILLAC

Ed McKeever, portrayed by Jim Parks, describes the battles of Sparta to demonstrate his acting ability.

Satirizing everything from Cinderella to big businessmen, The Solid Gold Cadillac, directed by Mr. William Waack, was presented by North and East Schools February 16 and 17.

The play, centered around the colossal manufacturing firm, General Products, was set in a modern background in which Cinderella was a little old lady, Mrs. Partridge, whose pumpkin coach was a solid gold Cadillac driven by a golden chauffeur.

Tension began when the probing questions of Mrs. Partridge, who owned ten shares of stock, upset the annual stockholders' meeting. The corporation chairmen appeased the little old lady by giving her a phony job for $150 a week, but she unexpectedly discovered that General Products had forced a subsidiary firm into bankruptcy. Mrs. Partridge reported the corruption to the ex-chairman of the Board who then tried to regain control of the corporation. Eventually, he and Mrs. Partridge outwitted the Board of Directors.

Leads in The Solid Gold Cadillac were Debby Langerman as Mrs. Partridge, and Jim Parks as Ed McKeever, ex-chairman of the Board. Supporting cast members included Jim Henderson as Mr. Blessington, Frank Green as Mr. Snell, Tom Sitron as Mr. Metcalfe, and Bret Leonard as Mr. Gillie. Nancy Connors played Miss Shotgraven, a secretary.

South and West present comedy, MY SISTER EILEEN

Smiling approvingly, Mimi Chesterton accepts a gift from her often-clumsy boyfriend.

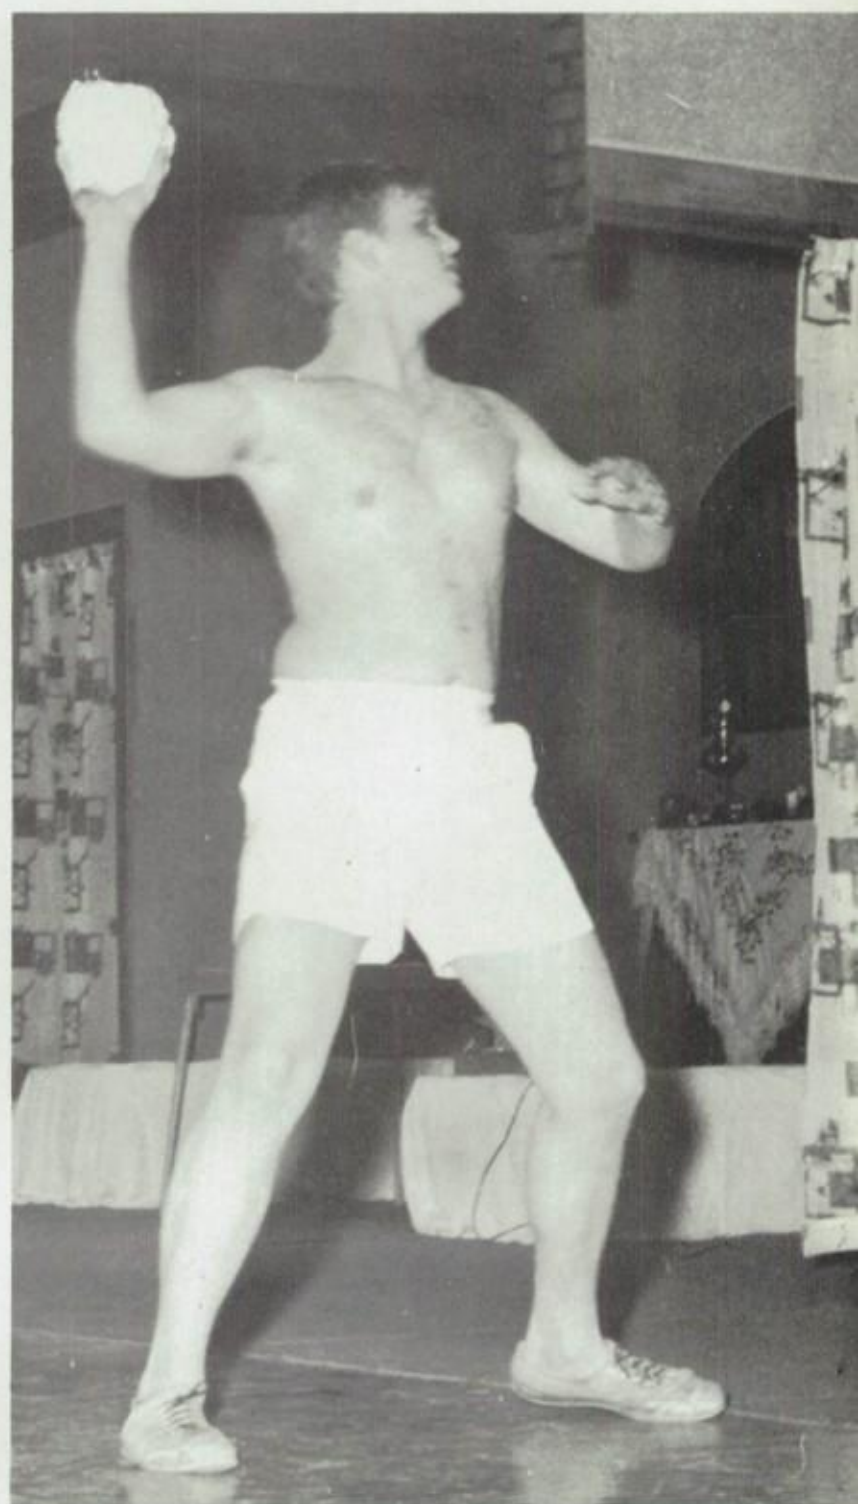

South and West Schools combined their dramatic efforts to present the light comedy My Sister Eileen.

The play was set in a Greenwich Village basement studio, with city noises, police and Brazilian sailors complicating the situation. The plot revolved around two sisters, Ruth and Eileen, who came to New York to break into the writing and acting businesses, respectively. Mr. Appopolous, who captured the naive sisters, talked them into renting a rambling, noisy apartment. The comedy continued as the sisters learned to adapt to city life and the business world.

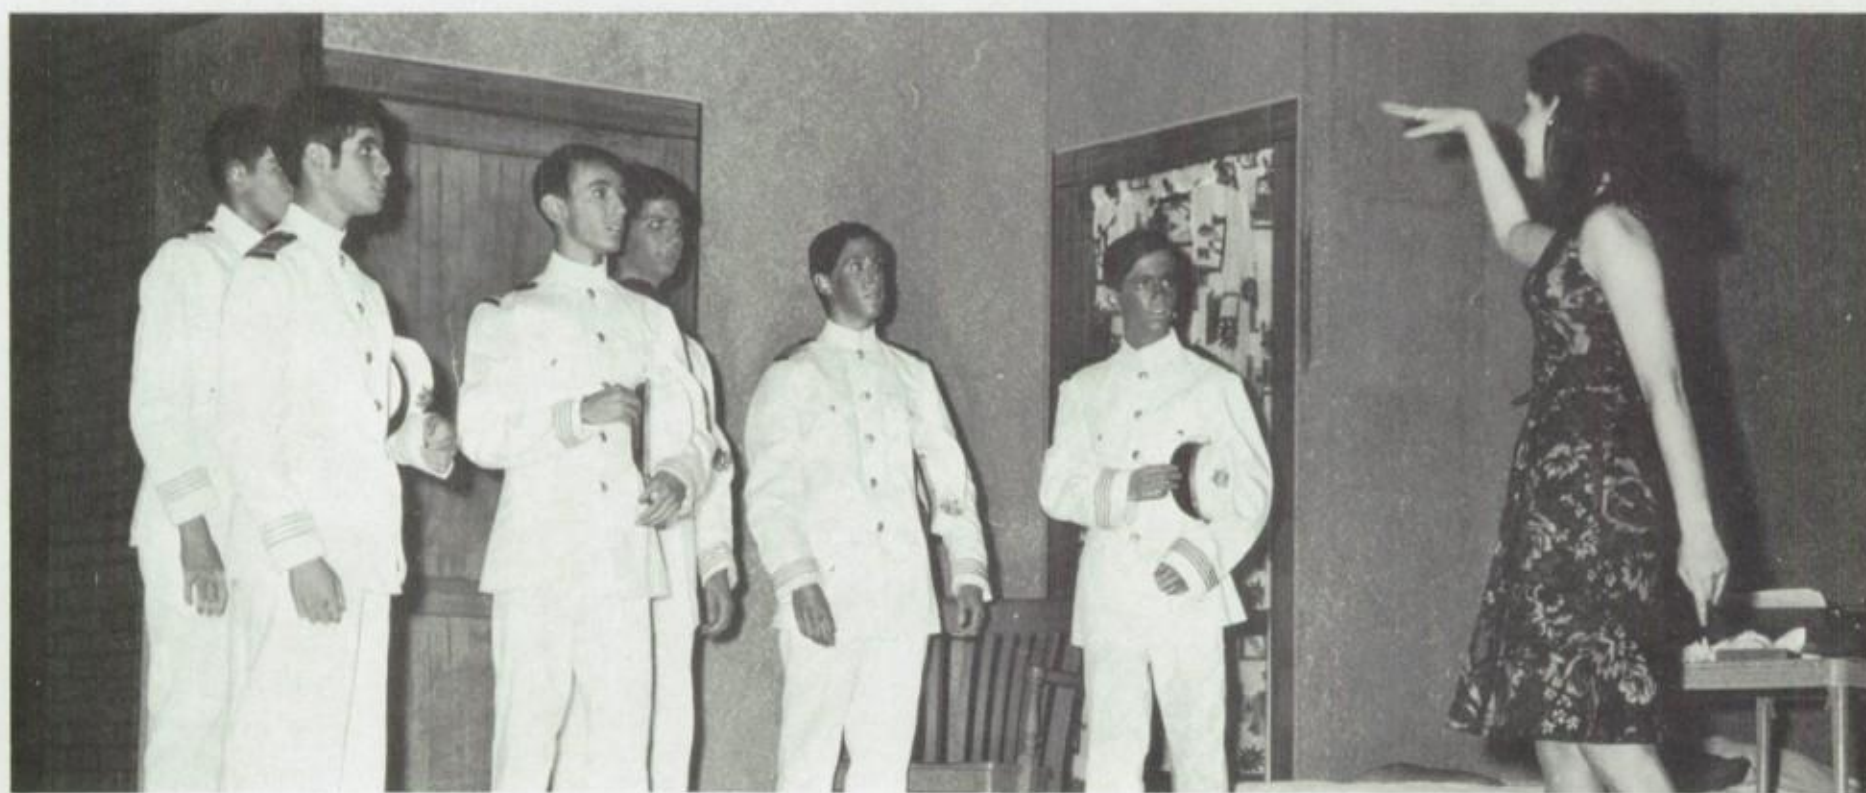

Jacque Waller played Ruth, the protective older sister attempting to break into the journalism business. Mimi Chesterton portrayed the beautiful, incorruptible Eileen. Other characters included Mr. Appopolous, played by Ben Roth, and Wreck, portrayed by Terry Gunnell. The entire production was directed by Mr. William Ditton.

Repertory Company offered opportunities for professional growth through experimentation in the field of theater to students interested in dramatic careers.

The twenty-one members of Repertory Company became familiar with plays, authors, and theatrical styles through discussions and rehearsals.

The Company taped a scene from Luther to send to junior high schools as an example of activities offered by the Speech Arts Department. Look Homeward, Angel was presented for the annual state speech contest, and the Company also produced Surely You Jest, an original musical composed by an ETHS graduate. Highlighting this year's dramatic explorations, the Company performed the full-length version of William Shakespeare's A Midsummer Night's Dream.

The Speech Arts Department also provided activities for students not enrolled in Speech Arts courses to participate in theatrical presentations.

Freshmen in East School presented "Good Grief! A Charlie Brown Revue" early in November. The revue was an adaptation of some of the best of Charles Schultz's cartoon-foolery interspersed with music and original lyrics written for the revue. The production was under the direction of Mrs. Catherine Beemer and Mr. William Waack.

North School produced a rollicking "Roaring 20's" sketch outline of scenes from The Boyfriend in February. The plot involved the flirtatious activities of boys and girls in that era. Flappers, beads, frothy music, and the Charleston highlighted the production, which was directed by Miss Heather Paterson.

South School up-dated Alice in Wonderland and presented its revised version in March. Alice donned a mini-skirt, turned teeny-bopper, and explored Wonderland to the tune of the Jefferson Airplane's "White Rabbit." The play, using no animal costumes but animal characteristics, was directed by student teachers Susan Waterman and Susan Tutskey.

Members of the Repertory Company enjoy a casual mixture of song and dance.

Factory workers dispute wage increase in PAJAMA GAME

Milton Frank proclaims his undying devotion to Lynn Kearney.

The ETHS Summer Music Theater Workshop, under the direction of Mr. William Ditton, presented the Adler and Ross musical comedy Pajama Game.

The story was centered around Babe, chairman of the factory's grievance committee, and Sid, the new superintendent. The situation became complicated when Babe and Sid found themselves taking opposite stands on the factory worker's demands for higher wages. Sid, however, accidentally discovered the boss's records and challenged him to raise the workers' pay. The comic dilemma was resolved when factory employees received a seven and one half cent raise.

Musical selections, directed by Mr. Richard Stromberg, ranged from the moody "Hey There" to the raucous "Once-a-Year-Day." Mr. Alvin Mistak conducted the orchestra.

Members of the cast included Lynn Kearney and Kerry McCarthy as Babe, with Milton Frank and Judd Parkin playing Sid.

Earl Kirshner, as Charley, toasts his future bride.

A small mystical Scottish town reappeared on Evanston's stage for the spring musical, Lerner and Loewe's Brigadoon, presented March 15, 16, 22, and 23.

The plot revolved around two young Americans, who, while visiting Scotland, became lost in a forest. As they wandered, Brigadoon, which comes back to earth for one day each century, appeared before the visitors. Tommy, one of the Americans, fell in love with Fiona, a citizen of Brigadoon, but decided to return to America. His love for Fiona, however, had become so strong that he returned to the site at Brigadoon, and the town miraculously reappeared to reunite Tommy and Fiona.

Bill Williams and Chris Smith played Tommy, and Joanna Paps and Janet Rogness starred as Fiona. Other members of the cast included Brooks Baldwin and Judd Parkin as Jeff, Tommy's friend, and Betty Jo Webber and Bobbie Sue Proper as Meg. Ellen Rosenblum and Stephanie Simmons portrayed Jean, and Earl Kirshner and Sandy Champion played Charlie. Tim Landfield and Paul Ilmer were Harry.

Conducted by Mr. Alvin Mistak, the ETHS orchestra accompanied the cast and chorus, Miss Donna Gordon choreographed the musical, and Mr. Richard Rosewall conducted the chorus. Elaborate sets, special lighting effects, and colorful period costumes highlighted the production, which was directed by Mr. William Ditton.

Tommy explains to Fiona, played by Joanna Paps, why he can't remain in Brigadoon.

Turnabouts feature ouija boards and jug music

Pausing for a breather between dances, John Bevington and Kathy Devery enjoy a coke at the Girls' Club Turnabout.

Bizarre decor, casual atmospheres, and jug music were some of the features of this year's turnabouts.

Popcorn machines, ouija boards, and bright flashing lights set the mood for the Turnabout, "Signs of Our Time," which was held November 11 in North School Cafeteria.

Colored lights, blinking on and off, created a "psychedelic" atmosphere, while Mr. Lazier's popcorn machine, along with soft drinks, provided refreshments for those who moved to the student lounge. A ouija board surrounded by fortunetellers foretold the futures of the speculating couples who stopped there. Horoscopes for each month were written on cards as souvenirs.

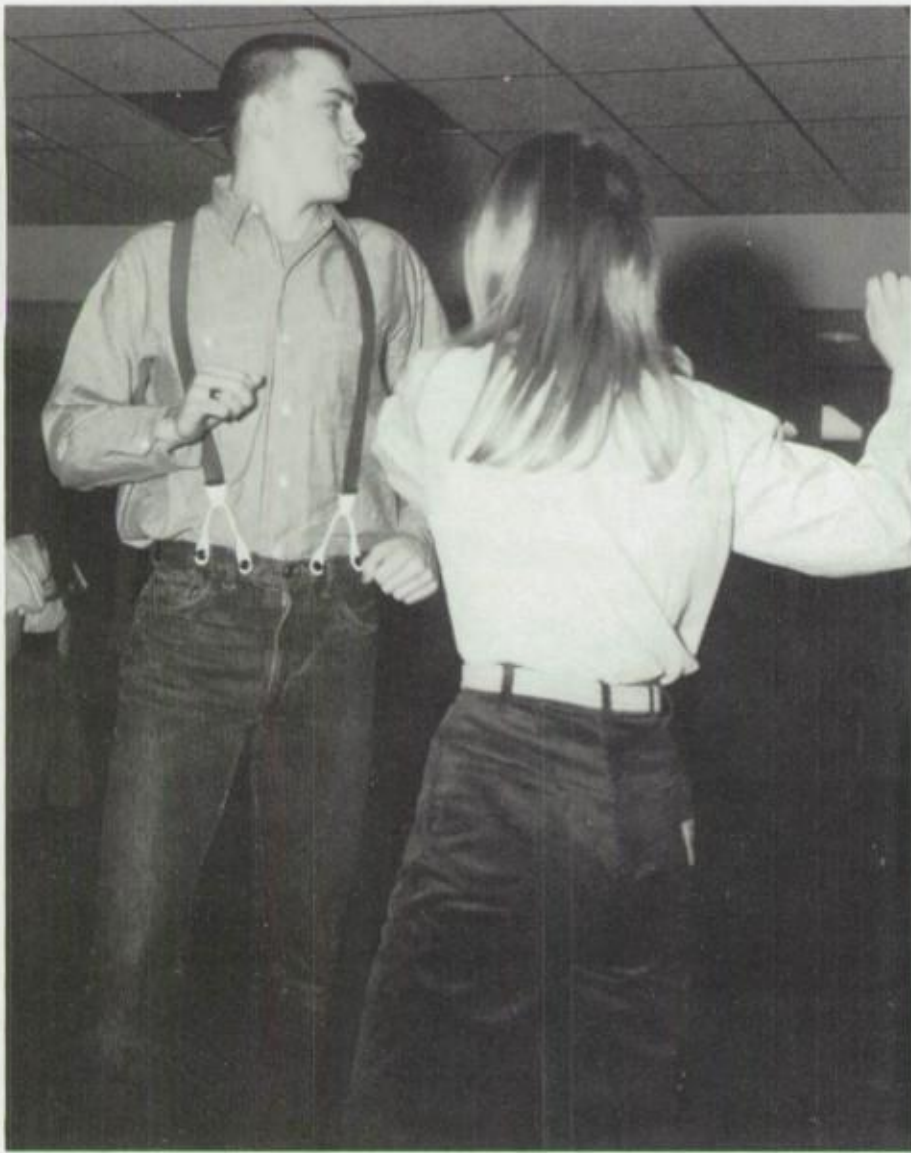

Entertainment was provided by the Mass, a band comprised of ETHS students.

Blue jeans, straw hats, and a L'il Abner atmosphere highlighted the Sadie Hawkins Day Dance on February 24, held in the South School Cafeteria.

The hillbilly theme was carried out with a jug band and L'il Abner decorations and refreshments. A prize was awarded to the grubbiest-looking couple at the end of the evening's festivities. The Dylan Street Blues Band played rock music, and the Beaver Valley Philharmonic featured jug sounds.

Wildkits finish year undefeated in Suburban League

Recovering from a bitter loss to Rockford in the first game of the season, the Kits went on to capture the Suburban League football championship for the ninth time in eleven years.

With last year's undefeated season behind them, Evanston was stunned in their opener by a score of 7-6, falling to Rockford West after a mud-soaked battle. Being the first loss since Evanston was defeated by New Trier in 1966, the encounter broke an eleven game winning streak for the Kits.

Handicapped by the Rockford loss the week before, Coach Murney Lazier stated that the hardest game of the season was at Waukegan. The Kits won, however, 31-7.

The turning point of the season was the game against Proviso East on which the bid for the Suburban League Championship hinged. The Kits came through to win 20-6.

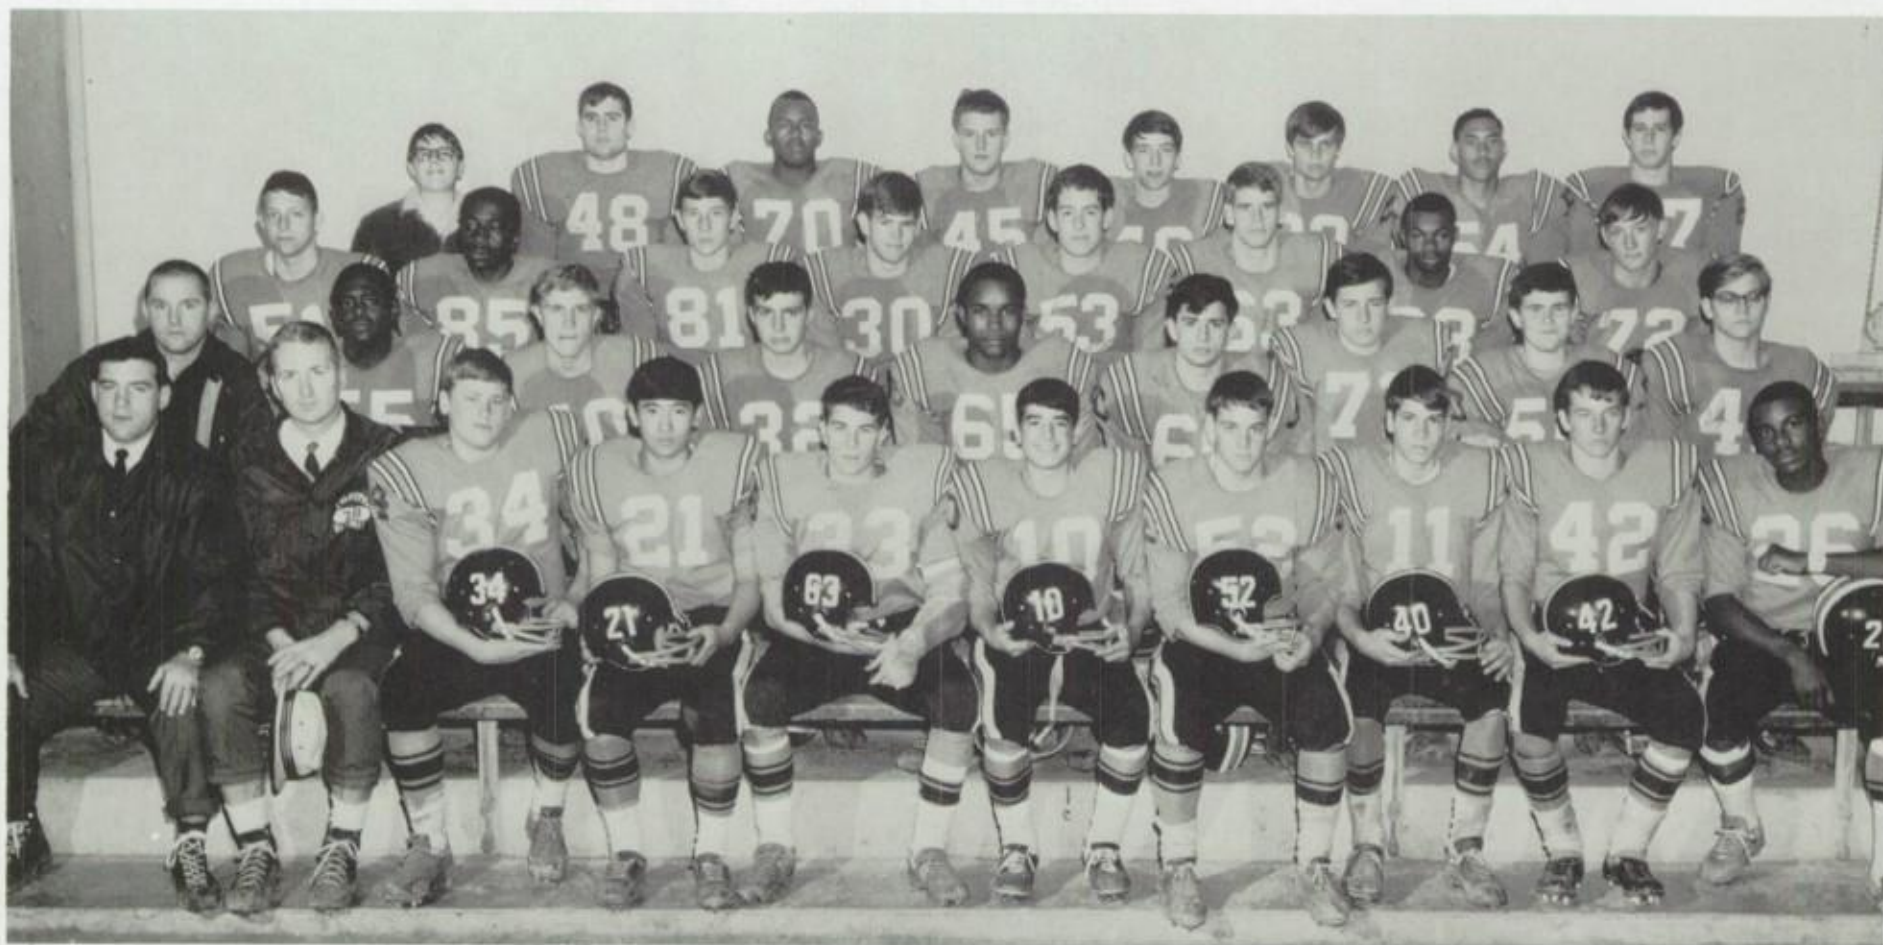

All Suburban League selections from ETHS were linemen Stan Helm, Farrell Jones, Bob Johnston, Pat Lazier, Larry May, John Redding, and Steve Weingartner. All League backs were Dave Adams, Crawford Burns, Dave Herman, and Rick Hoover. Sandy Champion and Frank Nadler received honorable mention.

Under the direction of Head Coach Ken McGonagle, the varsity soccer team finished second only to New Trier in the Suburban League. Compiling a record of 6-1-1 in Suburban League and an 11-2-1 record statewide, Evanston ranked second in Illinois tying with New Trier East.

Six members of the varsity, Paul Rubin de Celis, Tom Beck, John Ashford, Geoff Marchant, Bob Merubia, and Walt Perrin, were chosen for All-League. Marchant, Merubia, and Perrin also made All-State.

Perrin, according to Coach McGonagle, led the team with 18 goals, setting a new team record.

Runners place second in SL

The Cross Country team ended its 1967 season second only to New Trier East. Unable to defeat New Trier, Evanston still finished with a total of nine wins and two losses. Coach Dave Bartel, in his first year at Evanston, said he was pleased with the team's record as a whole.

Interval training over different distances was stressed in work-out sessions, according to Coach Bartel. The team ran its only event, the two mile distance, in forest preserves, bridle paths, and cinder tracks. The underlying strategy was to run as a team, and this year proved even more strongly that the team's standing counted more than a victory for one individual.

Senior Dave Abernathy led the team as one of the strongest runners, while breaking the Suburban League course record with a new time of 9:35.2.

We're number one!

That first place trophy looks good to Kits Al Keith, Walt Perrin, Bob Lackey, and Farrell Jones.

Walt Perrin sits on the shoulders of Farrell Jones while he cuts down the victory nets after defeating Galesburg 70-51 for the state crown.

Pookie Perrin and Ron Cooper weaving through a full-court press, Bob Lackey and Farrell Jones monopolizing the boards, and Bill Battinus sinking a 25-foot jump shot led the ETHS cagers to their first Illinois High School Association State Basketball Championship in 61 years.

The Kits finished regular season play with a 21-1 record and a Suburban League title. The drive for the state trophy tightened when the Kits swept the Niles West Regional, winning easily against St. George, Niles North, and New Trier East. At the sectionals in Arlington Heights, Evanston crushed Grant and Maine South, eliminating them from state competition. Lockport Central came closest to the Kits at the super-sectional, going down by 12 points, 70-58.

ETHS scored 70 in all their games in the State Tournament, defeating Peoria Central 70-48 in the quarter-final, Crane Tech 70-54 in the semi-final, and Galesburg 70-51 for the championship.

Orange shoelaces, blue and orange T-shirts, wild cheers, and a crowd of over 5,000 turned out to welcome the state champs back to ETHS. A parade of 500 cars, police escort, and city officials accompanied the cagers from Golf Mill to Beardsley Gym for a pep rally honoring the number one team.

In addition, several of the team members also received individual recognition by various state and suburban organizations. Bob Lackey was chosen unanimously for the All-Tournament High School Basketball League by Associated Press. Farrell Jones and Bob Lackey made all-suburban first team, and Walt Perrin and Ron Cooper were chosen all-suburban second team.

Tankmen take SL, district titles

Evanston tankmen captured 1968 Suburban League and district championship while finishing third in the state.

ETHS, with 284 points, took first in five Suburban League events, edging out New Trier East with 277 points. Barry Mendelson, a triple winner, placed first in the 100-yard butterfly, the 200-yard individual medley, and the 100-yard backstroke. Doug Beyer won the 50-yard freestyle, and Barry Lifschutz took first in the 100-yard backstroke.

In state competition, Evanston placed third with 127½ points, falling behind Hinsdale Central's 191 and New Trier East's 136. Doug Beyer finished second in the 50-yard freestyle and Jim Blades took second in diving.

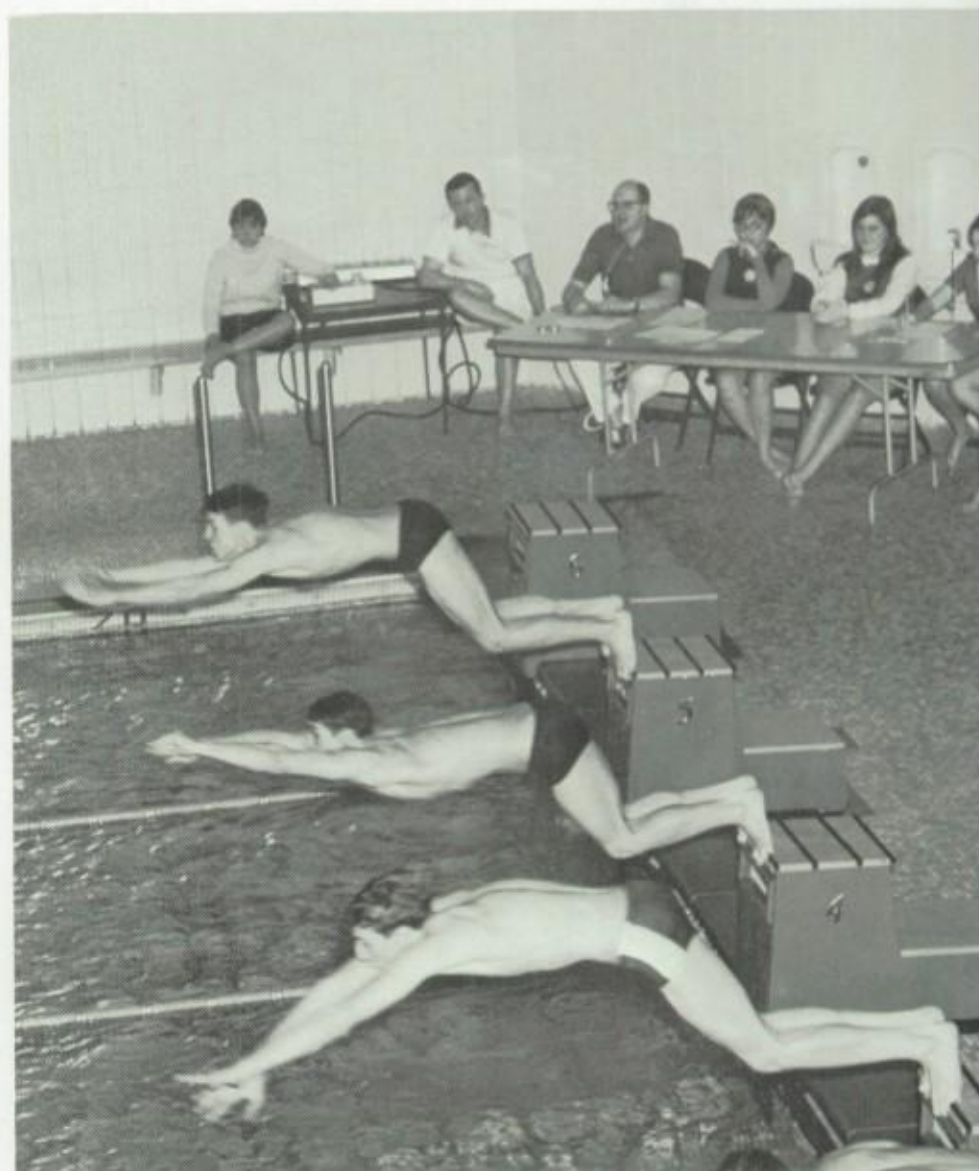

Even though the Notsnave boys finished third in the state, the team's overall dual meet record was a commendable 13-1, losing only to undefeated Hinsdale Central. Coach Dobbie Burton said, "For the number of qualifiers we had, our boys did real well, but Hinsdale's just too strong."

Gymnasts take Suburban League

All-around gymnast Chuck Epstein performs a well-executed handstand on the parallel bars.

Evanston gymnasts captured the Suburban League title this year with 115½ points overpowering their nearest competitor, New Trier East, by 10 points. Led by Mark Yedor's first on the trampoline, the Kits placed in all six events held in Beardsley Gym.

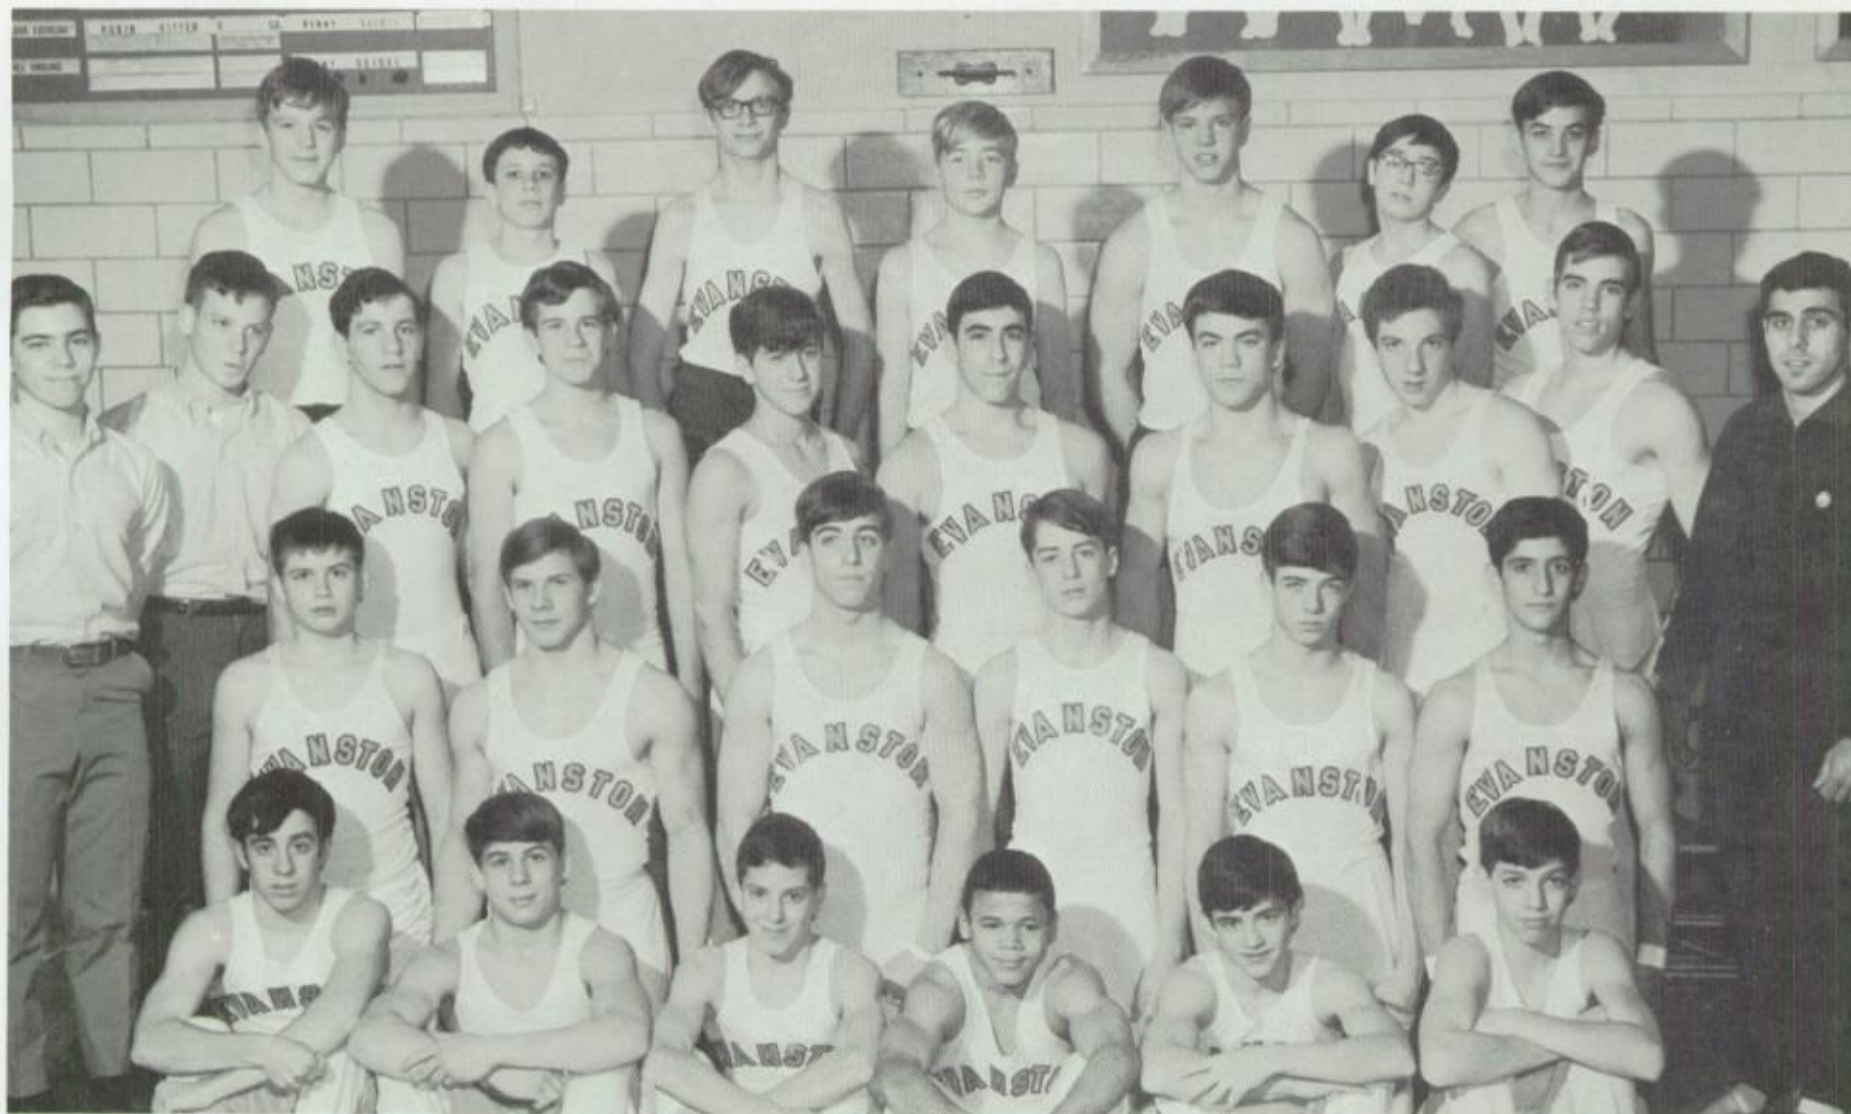

Other Suburban League finishers included Chuck Epstein, who placed second in all-around competition, and ringmen Skip Frowick and Jim Levy, who finished second and third.

The state meet was a disappointment to the Kit Gymnasts with Evanston qualifying three men for the finals. Mark Yedor finished tenth, and eighth and ninth places were awarded to Skip Frowick on rings and Dick Reichstein on parallel bars. Disregarding the state meet, the gymnasts had a successful season finishing with a 7-2 dual meet record.

Matmen finish fourth in SL

Kit wrestlers ended the 1967-68 season by placing second in the district meet with Steven Burns, Terry Bowie, Fred Ganet, George Drayton, Albert Meredith, and Lamont Harris qualifying for the sectional meet. Heavyweight Drayton took a third place and Burns became the only ETHS wrestler eligible for the state meet in McGaw Hall. Maine South took the title, but Burns placed second in his division.

Despite problems from injuries, ineligibilities, and inexperience, the ETHS wrestlers placed fourth in the Suburban League. The team anticipates returning lettermen for the next year.

Early practices highlight spring sports

Warm weather came early this year and welcomed outdoor practice for baseball, golf, track, and tennis.

Coach Ken McGonagle built the Baseball Team around his five returning batmen: Geoff Marchant, pitcher; John Redding, catcher; Doug Carlberg, third base; Crawford Burns, center field; and Walter Perrin, second base. Because of the good weather, the team was actually able to play their first game for the first time in years.

The 1968 Golf Team, under the leadership of Coach Dobbie Burton, also took advantage of early practice outdoors. The returning golfers included Ray Landy, Dave Cook, Allen Chester, Tom Browns, and Fred Basole.

The Track Team finished a successful indoor season with a record of 7-1. The cindermen captured the Suburban League title with individual SL champions Mike Tucker in the 2-mile, Dave Abernathy in the 880-yard run, and Carlos Matthews in the 50-yard dash.

Evanston's Tennis Team looked forward to a winning season in '68. Leading the racquetmen were returning stars Bob Reissen, Bob Thompson, Roger Friskey, Dan Robin, and Phil Thompson. A prominent contender for the state competition was Mike Madura.

Is he out? wonders Doug Carlberg as Bob Lipke slides into third.

Girls active in sports activities

Senior leader Peg Schleker watches the progress of Ann Melton's free throw.

Girls participated in various school and interscholastic events through sport organizations and activities sponsored by the Girls Physical Education Department.

The Girls Interscholastic Tennis Team finished a successful year under the new sponsor, Mrs. Joyce Mackey. The team remained undefeated by Niles West, Niles East, Deerfield, New Trier West, and Niles North.

Girls who were active in intramural badminton were eligible to try out for the Girls Interscholastic Badminton team. The team was sponsored by Mrs. Carole Pongonis.

Senior leaders assisted gym teachers while preparing themselves for careers in physical education. The girls officiated at girls' intramural basketball while learning proper officiating techniques.

Girls Sports Board reorganizes its administration

Girls' Sports Board expanded its administration among the four schools this year as ETHS divided. A president from each school was elected as well as representatives from auxiliary and executive branches.

Communication was increased between schools and participation in Girls' Intramurals was stressed. Under the supervision of Mrs. Ann Stevens and four school presidents, Sports Board planned and publicized Girls' Olympics, the annual swimming and gymnastics meets, two award deserts, and a final sports banquet.

Girls competed against each other for points for their particular school in Girls Intramurals. Team and individual sports such as basketball, table tennis, and archery were continued. Points were totalled and the winning school was announced at the Sports Award Banquet in the spring.

Students offer time to community, school services

The Aquatic Staff Timettes check the times of the varsity swimmers.

For their annual service project, Lettermen's Club, sponsored by Mr. William Bunn, sold Christmas trees and Willie Wildkit decals. Rick Hoover was president of the club comprised of athletes holding varsity letters for sports participation.

The Trampoline Staff, under the supervision of Mr. Gerald Fontana, met every Saturday morning for ten weeks to help interested grade school children improve their skills. Members of the staff were chosen from the gymnastics team and other skilled students.

The Aquatic Staff, sponsored by Mr. John Terhune, taught grade school children fundamental water safety as well as swimming skills. Led by Lee Collins and David Smith, the members participated as Timettes and summer lifeguards in addition to their Saturday morning teaching sessions.

Cheerleaders and Willies don new uniforms

Yell leaders Fred Becker and Owen Greenberg encourage school spirit throughout ETHS.

Videotape machines and new uniforms aided this year's cheerleaders in achieving a greater degree of enthusiasm and precision, according to Mrs. Carole Pongonis, cheerleader sponsor.

The cheerleaders were chosen the previous spring on the basis of skill, appearance, enthusiasm, character, and teacher recommendation. Cheerleaders supported the teams at the basketball and football games, swimming and wrestling meets, and baseball and soccer games. Co-captains of the varsity squad were Laurie Williams and Julie Bramlette.

The Willie Wildkit squad was also fitted with new uniforms this year. Willies, unlike the cheerleaders, who worked as a unit, were independent of each other. Miss Judith Jahant was sponsor, and Laurie Kapp was head of the squad.

Intramurals offers diversity of activities

Boys' Intramurals offered recreation for boys who were not participating in interscholastic sports. Among the twenty activities available to boys were touch football, table tennis, water polo, track, cross country, and golf.

Boys received points for individual participation which were tallied into class and school ranks. Field Day, which was held in June, climaxed the year's events. The softball throw, fungo hitting, and a tug-of-war were among the activities that challenged the boys' strength and endurance.

Girls intramurals were divided into schools and the point system was used to keep records of participation. Girls were offered such activities as basketball, tennis, roller-skating, and bowling. Outdoor olympics were held in October featuring track and field events. A gymnastics meet and swim meet were also sponsored by Girls Intramurals. A sports desert at the end of the year recognized individual intramural participants and awarded a trophy to the school with the greatest number of points.

In boys' free throw competition Larry Johnson takes careful aim.

With perfect form Julie Blackmore shoots for a bull's eye.

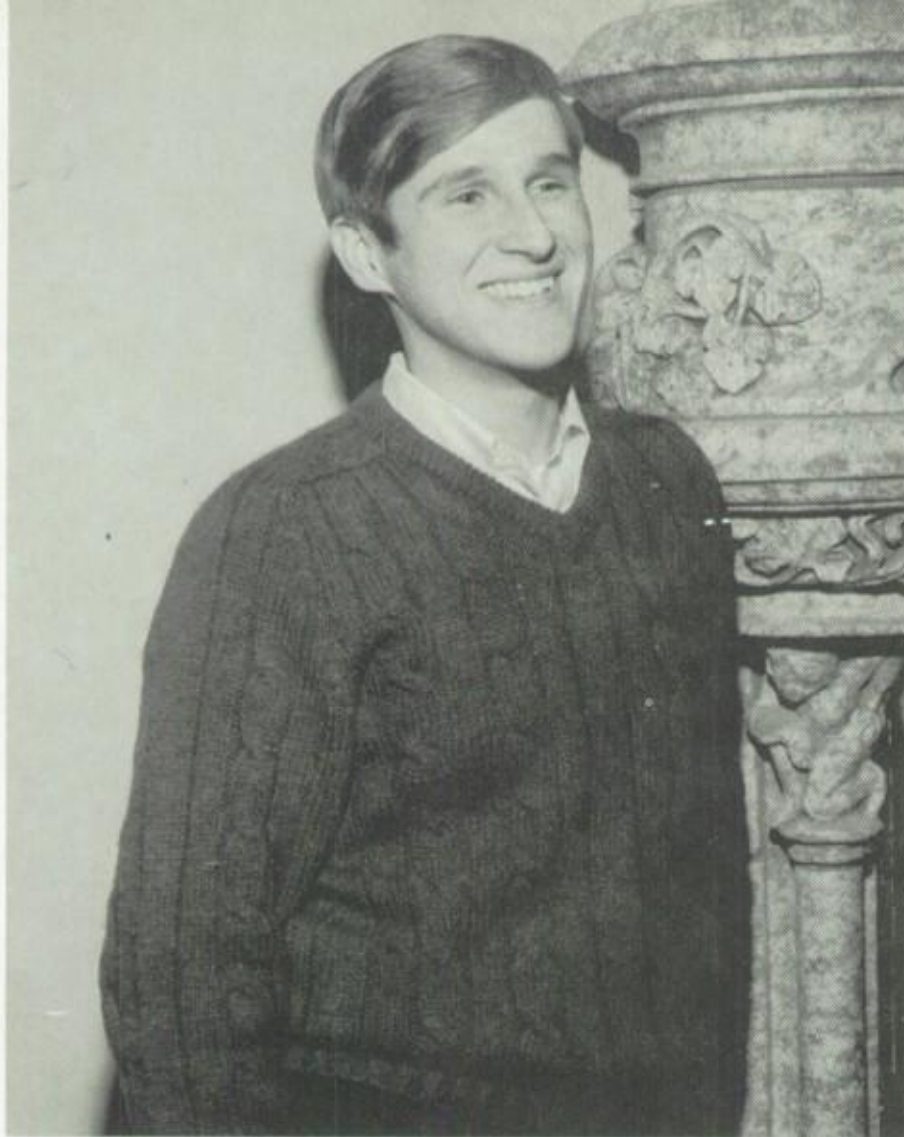

Rick Tulskey gets ready to return a serve in a boys' ping pong match.

SENIORS

Chris Smith, Senior Class president, relaxes after a Senior Board meeting.

ETHS divided, but the Class of '68 remained one. Senior spirit began and remained constant through the unifying efforts and activities initiated by the Senior Class Board.

President Chris Smith led the Class in traditional projects to spark senior enthusiasm and to raise money. The sale of graduation announcements and profits from the senior film helped provide the funds for the Senior Class gift. Selected by the Board, Mr. Ralph Potter, sponsor, Dr. Lloyd S. Michael, and 1008 seniors, the gift served as a reminder to underclassmen and faculty of the first "modular" seniors, the Class of '68.

The annual senior movie provided additional income. Directed by Todd McCarthy, the original film was featured with the motion picture "The Guns of Navarone."

Seniors wore shorts and rejoiced in their distinction at Senior Day. They competed, were honored, crammed, relaxed, and joined in their pride of being seniors.

Senior Prom and Graduation finally arrived. Subsidized by profits from activities, the Prom was again held at the Orrington Hotel. Commencement was the final victory for a class that had struggled to retain its unity. The Class of '68 graduated as one.

Division couldn't destroy class unity

Yell-leader Fred Becker entertains at one of the varsity football games.

Senior. The magical, awesome year was at last attained. We became the gods of frightened underclassmen and the banes of our second-semester teachers.

The new schools were finally opened and we found ourselves with four lounges, reg, no parking permits, and separation. Determined seniors were usually able to surmount the barriers imposed by division, thereby preserving class spirit and unity.

Tradition was emphasized in the annual East-North Turkey Trot and the Senior Cheer Section that displayed orange and blue hats at football and basketball games. Seniors were given partial responsibility for the functioning of the new facilities in Honor Guard positions for corridor and cafeteria supervision.

Lounge provided a haven for weary seniors. Music and cokes often interrupted serious study, while window paintings, banners, and conversation kept activity at a peak.

The modular system not only opened opportunities for better college preparation through independent research and flexible scheduling but also provided the atmosphere for cultivating individual interests. We had been given the impetus and the freedom to guide our own educations.
